Not Gliders, But Airships Wanted.

Another Attempt to Kill.

Rather Expensive Targets.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 8.

COL. LINDBERGH continues his work with air gliders, traveling without engines, they seem to fascinate the great pilot. He has tried flying gliders before daylight, to experiment with early morning winds, and recently flew 15 miles in a plane with no engine. Reporters say he means to try for the glider long distance and endurance records.

THAT is all interesting and courageous, but has little to do with the important part of flying still in its infancy. Ships that will not crash, pilots trained to think only of passengers' safety, not so much about proving that they are not "yellow" are needed. The pilot that will "go through in any kind of weather" needs to be replaced by the man who will take passengers only in perfectly safe weather. After that will come planes and flying methods to which no weather will make any difference.

THE glider, interesting toy, goes with air currents, teaching, perhaps, a little about flying. But it has as little to do with great airships of the future as the Hawaiian surf board has to do with improved ocean steamships.

LINDBERGH commands the attention and respect of capital and industry. What he recommends will be tried. Even the government might wake up and cease leaving the flying future to chance, if Lindbergh urged it. His mind should be on weather-defying airships for 1,000 passengers, not on a cunning little board that will skim on the air with a man sitting on it.

IF YOU say that a man who knows nothing about flying should not presume to advise one who knows all about flying, please remember that the inventor of the sewing machine did not know how to sew.

ANOTHER attempted murder among our Latin-American friends. An attempt, fortunately a failure, is made on the life of Mello Vianna, vice president of Brazil. As in the recent Mexican outrage, the man attacked was making a political address and the would-be murderer was moved by political hatreds. Only harsh severity can meet such an assassination epidemic.

OUR gentlemen at the naval conference are said to agree on a program of 15 battleships for 1931, Britain and America to have the same number. Japan would have nine. Fifteen new battleships would cost this country, with its costly building methods, at least $900,000,000 and offer 15 conspicuous targets to enemy aircraft.

THE cost of 10 battleships would provide airplanes and submarines enough to clear the earth's waters of all floating craft. And the engineers know it. But that would not supply profits for battleship makers.

AFTER the battleships are launched will come the expense of camouflaging them and providing harbors to hide them away from planes and submarines in case war should come.

BRITAIN and this country continue the effort to suppress use of submarines. Britain, depending on such ships to feed her population, wants no submarines, of course. They would starve Britain in war. Uncle Sam is the kind-hearted cat that pulls Britain's chestnuts out of the fire, or tries to.

WE DO NOT depend on food from abroad. We DO need submarines to protect our coasts, the Panama canal, our harbors, and island possessions. What British eloquence is it that persuades our agents to act against the national welfare? What British influence in our government gives British instructions to American delegates? Fortunately, France and Japan, represented by delegates that do not get their instructions from Britain, will probably block the submarine nonsense.

TEXAS has an "anti-chain-store association" to drive and keep out chain stores owned outside the state. The governor and other high officials are said to indorse the association, which seeks to protect thousands of small merchants driven to the wall by chain store efficiency and economy.

THE plan will not work, for efficiency and economy always win in the long run. You might as well have organized stage coach drivers to keep out the locomotives. It is useless for merchants to deceive themselves with false hopes. The chain store can be fought only with greater efficiency and greater economy. If small merchants can organize and accomplish that they will solve their problem. Otherwise not.

2 GIRLS RESCUED FROM GAS FUMES

FIREMEN WIN LONG FIGHT TO REVIVE SISTERS

Father Finds New Kensington Children Overcome as One Groans in Room of Home

Overcome by gas fumes while taking baths, Annabelle Kelly, 9, and her sister, Edith, 7, of 1181 Fifth avenue, New Kensington, were revived through heroic efforts of New Kensington firemen early today. The children are recovering in the Citizens' General Hospital. Their mother, Mrs. John Kelly, who suffered from shock, was able to visit them in the hospital today.

The father of the children went to their rescue when he heard them groan. Annabelle was found lying on the floor, while her younger sister was unconscious in the tub. The screams of Mrs. Kelly caused neighbors to send in a fire alarm.

Fire Chief Edward Clawson and Assistant Chief W. G. Bartlick assisted by other firemen, took turns in working on the children with inhalators. The firemen worked for two hours before the children were revived. Chief Clawson, investigating the cause of children's experience, stated that the bathroom door had been tightly shut and that the small room filled with fumes from a small gas heater under a water tank.

Dr. H. W. Thomas, of New Kensington, was summoned to the Kelly home while firemen were working on the children and after they had been revived, he ordered them taken to the hospital.

DRY TRANSFER SLATED FOR PASSAGE

Bill Shifting Enforcement Power to Department of Justice Up in House

By WILLIAM S. NEAL,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—The first proposal of the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission for reorganization of federal prohibition enforcement machinery was slated for overwhelming approval in the House today with passage of the Williamson bill transferring the Prohibition Bureau from the Treasury to the Justice Department.

Meanwhile the second plan of the crime commission—creating commissioners' courts to deal with petty violations—was being revised by House drys. The third major proposal—creating a unified border control—was still being considered by the Treasury.

OTHER BILLS PERILED

Administration leaders were confident the transfer bill would be approved by Senate as well as by House, but other measures faced an uncertain future in the present session.

Despite dissension in the House over the extent to which the Treasury should be stripped of power over industrial alcohol, leaders predicted passage of the bill as indorsed by the administration.

Under its terms, all dry agents would be placed under the Attorney General, who also would be given joint authority to write the Treasury's industrial alcohol regulations, and power to veto a permit because of law violations.

PLANE CARRIER DISPUTE SEEN AT PARLEY

U. S., Britain Far Apart On Tonnage of Aircraft Transports; Capital Glum

By HARRY R. FLORY,
International News Service.

LONDON, Feb. 8.—While Premier Ramsay MacDonald's statement outlining Great Britain's aims and plans for naval limitation was viewed today as being generally in complete accord with American views on limitation, it revealed wide Anglo-American digerences on the question of aircraft carriers.

Premier MacDonald proposed that the maximum aircraft carrier tonnage for the United States and Great Britain, placed at 135,000 tons at the Washington conference of 1921-1922, should be reduced to 100,000 tons.

HANDICAPS U. S.

This proposal is likely to cause a stir of resentment in the "big Navy" blocs in the United States Senate and House of Representatives, for such a reduction would stringhalter the United States and make the American Navy decidedly inferior to the British navy in the aircraft carrier category for the next 17 years.

In the opinion of many experts, aircraft carriers, with their scores of death-dealing planes, are the most formidable weapons of naval warfare afloat.

The Washington conference fixed the age limit of aircraft carriers at 20 years, but added the proviso that all aircraft carrier tonnage in existence or building on November 12, 1921, should be considered experimental and therefore replaceable at any time without regard to age, within the

Shot on Street

FLORENCE LIS

Miss Lis, 17, 2818 Edwards way, shot by a man who rushed into a crowd at Twelfth street and Penn avenue and fired a pistol.

CROWD FAILS TO CAPTURE GUNMAN

Outdistances Pursuers in Chase in Penn Avenue; Unknown to His Victim

While 17-year-old Florence Lis, of 2818 Edwards way, South Side, is in St. Francis Hospital with a bullet wound in her left hip, police today were searching for her assailant who shot her in view of scores of pedestrians at Penn avenue and Twelfth street, early last night.

AWAITING TROLLEY

Miss Lis and Irene Michalak, 16, of 2705 Concord street, and Catherine Londek, 18, of 2706 Mission street, employes of the Keystone Box Company, at Smallman and Twenty-eighth streets, were waiting for a street car at the time of the shooting. A man, about 22, brushed by more than a score of other persons waiting for cars and fired a revolver. The bullet struck Miss Lis in the hip.

ESCAPES PURSUERS

After shooting the girl the man ran up Penn avenue with several pedestrians at his heels. He disappeared in Thirteenth street.

Miss Lis was carried into a nearby restaurant and then taken to the hospital by police.

Detectives, after an investigation, said they believed the shot was fired by a demented man. He fired into the crowd, they were told by witnesses, without aiming at any one person.

"I didn't know I was shot at first" Miss Lis told the detective, "I felt a sting, then blood running down my stocking. When I saw the man running away with a revolver, I knew then I had been shot."

BANDITS FLEE; ONE WOUNDED

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Feb. 8.—One of four automobile bandits was believed wounded when Beaver Falls police opened fire early today in an attempt to halt the speeding automobile as the men passed through Morado en route to Pittsburgh. The shooting took place following a series of holdups at New Castle. Police of Pittsburgh and vicinity were warned to be on the lookout for the thugs.

At New Castle, the bandits are alleged to have held up Clearence McHattie, 1707 Washington street; Norman F. Grimm, 406 Bell avenue, and Merle Brush, 302½ South Walnut street.

Brush and Grimm were standing on a curb in Mahoningtown, a part of New Castle, when accosted by the thugs. Brush ran, but Grimm was taken into the car, and thrown out after the machine had gone two and one-half miles. Before tossing their victim to the road, the thugs stole his overcoat and scarf.

OAKLAND, Cal., Feb. 8.—(INS.)—Racing to the Atlantic seaboard in an effort to be the first transoceanic flier of 1930, William Ulbrich, noted young New York pilot, was winging eastward today from Oakland. His ultimate goal is Ostend, Belgium.

Ulbrich is headed for Lehighton, Pa., where he will take delivery of a "mystery" plane, constructed by Martin Jensen, dole racer. A navigator, possibly a girl, will be selected and test flights begun immediately. Ulbrich is the fiance of Viola Gentry, seriously injured in an attempt to set a sustained flight record.

SAN LUIS POTOSI, Mexico, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Arrivals from the town of Charcas, near here, today said that the mother of Daniel Flores, who attempted Wednesday to kill President Ortiz Rubio, died of a heart attack when police arrived at her home to arrest Daniel's brothers, Pilar and Arnulfo.

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Emilio Portes Gil, minister of interior and temporary head of the government, in a brief announcement today said that Daniel Flores, who Wednesday shot and wounded President Ortiz Rubio, had been placed at the disposal of the Mexican Attorney General Aguilar y Maya.

TAFT GREATLY IMPROVED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(INS.)—Former President William Howard Taft has progressed so far from the immediately critical stage of the illness which forced his sudden resignation as chief justice that his physicians today were considering the discontinuance of the twice-daily bulletins on his condition.

Attendants at the home said he had spent another "very restful night." Mr. Taft, it was said, slept well and was in good spirits this morning.

The distinguished statesman, according to the reports of Drs. Thomas Claytor and Francis Hagner, is getting helpful rest and nourishment, and spends most of his waking hours sitting up.

Display Weddings Rapped by Rector

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—Fashionable weddings are criticized by the Rev. Dr. Caleb R. Stetson, rector of Trinity Church. He says they are often vulgar displays of wealth; that the church is so decorated with palms and trees and flowers that it resembles a flower show and it is made difficult to realize that a religious service is taking place.

TAXIS TO RUN AGAIN TONIGHT

Their first experiment in night taxicab service successful, officials of the cab companies here were considering placing cabs on the streets again tonight, at least until 9 o'clock. The night service was resumed last night, when more than a score of cabs, with extra guards, operated downtown.

This was the first attempt to operate the cabs after dark since the strike began, a month ago.

A meeting of the striking drivers has been called for tomorrow afternoon at Moose Temple, but the executive committee of strikers has not made known just what the program of the meeting will be. It will be closed to all except members of the drivers' union, it was said.

Drivers who manned last night's cabs were paid $1 an hour for the extra period, those who drove during the daylight hours receiving a total wage of $12 for the day. It was reported that until the company announced the definite extra wage the new drivers failed to show a willingness to handle the cabs.

A rumor among the drivers today hinted a number of the new men planned to quit work tonight. It was said their plans called for boarding an excursion train for Philadelphia.

Aged Couple Penniless As Fire Razes Home

Peter Kinsella, 63, and his wife, 65, were penniless today. Fire swept over their modest one-story frameh ouse in the West End and left it in ruins. A dog and a few chickens were all that was saved.

The Kinsella home was in a field near Highman street and Shady Hill avenue. This morning Mrs. Kinsella heard the crackling of flames. She roused her husband, then ran up a hill to a neighbor's to summon firemen.

The home was beyond saving when firemen arrived.

A gas stove which the Kinsellas placed on their screened porch to warm thee hickens and the dog at night was the cause of the fire. It was upset, possibly by the dog, and its flames found the wooden house a ready fuel.

Hoover Starts Tonight To Seek Rest, Fish

By GEORGE E. DURNO,
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—President Hoover sets out today to reward himself with a brief respite from the cares of office after 11 months of unbroken labor.

Tonight, he and Mrs. Hoover and a very small party of intimate friends entrain for the southern tip of Florida, there to put in a week at deep-sea fishing.

Long Key, a fishing camp located midway between Miami and Key West will be their base, but they will remain for the most part several miles off shore.

The party is due to arrive at Long Key early Monday, and will immediately board the houseboat, Sauntérer, chartered by the President for the occasion from his friend, Jeremiah Milbank.

Accompanying the President will be his fishing companions of many seasons—Associate Justice Harlan Fiske Stone, of the Supreme Court; Dr. Vernon B. Kellogg, oldtime S street neighbor and Larry Richey, of the White House secretariat. Completing the immediate party will be Lieut. Commander Joel T. Boone, the presidential physician, and tagging along as "official observers"—from the shore—will be nine newspapermen and four photographers.

Sailfish, kingfish and all the other husky denizens of the gulf stream will be the objective of the little group. All of them are expert fishermen.

BERKEY, DENYING RUM CHARGES, RESUMES STAND MONDAY

JUDGE LAYS ATTACK TO POLITICS

Candidacy for State Senate Led to Indictment, Says Somerset Co. Ex-Jurist

Former Judge John A. Berkey, on trial with other officers of Somerset County and with alleged bootleggers of the district on charges of having conspired to violate the liquor laws, will resume the stand Monday, defense attorneys said today.

After two days in which defense witnesses denied any illegal activity by the judge, the former jurist took the stand late yesterday to brand his arrest as a move to hurt his political influence.

BRANDS CHARGES FALSE

"The indictment was returned against me shortly after I announced my intention of running for the State Senate. The charges contained in it are false fabrications and do not contain one iota, one scintilla of truth," he testified.

Printing firm officers, who printed the "Public View" newspaper backed by Judge Berkey, occupied most of the day in Federal Court, testifying as to where the money came from to pay them for their work.

Claude A. M. Welsh, star witness for the government, testified at the opening of the trial Monday that bootleggers of Somerset County contributed to the "Public View fund," in return for "protection promised them by Berkey."

Printing company officials said they received money for their work from Welsh and Berkey, and that each amount turned over to them was accompanied by a list of subscribers. The publishers themselves solicited subscriptions, it was testified.

At least three more days will be required to complete the case, attorneys said.

SURPRISE! By Quin Hall

HEFLIN LETTER ATTACKED BY COPELAND

Alabama Senator Demands Race Intermarriage Missive Be Expunged From Records

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—The task of choosing a committee to determine whether Senator Heflin (Dem.) Alabama, violated the Senate rules by placing in the record a letter on the intermarriage of white and Negroes fell to the lot today of Vice President Curtis.

Appointment of the committee was decided upon late yesterday after Senator Copeland (Dem.), of New York, had precipitated a heated debate on religious and racial differences by demanding that the letter be expunged from the congressional record. Copeland said the letter was "offensive to the people of my state."

Objecting, Heflin during the course of an hour's speech repeated the words of the letter, deplored inter-marriage for the white and black races, condemned the Catholic church for permitting members of the two races to attend the same institution, and complained against what he called "the Roman-Tammany regime of New York state and city." He concluded with a demand that the letter be read.

LETTER IS READ

Copeland's objections were overruled by a viva voce vote and the letter was read. It was addressed to Sam H. Reading, of Philadelphia, in response to a letter calling attention to the recent marriage of Phil Edwards, Negro captain of the New York University track team, to a white girl.

In the end, Senator Harrison (Dem.), Mississippi, suggested the appointment of a committee to determine whether insertion of the letter violated the Senate rules. All agreed to the proposal and Vice President Curtis left the appointment over until today to give Heflin and Copeland an opportunity to confer upon its membership.

RESENTS CHURCH ATTACK

During the course of the debate, Senator Walsh, Democrat, Massachusetts, objected to Heflin's attack upon churches and said that all northern institutions received whites and Negroes upon a basis of equality.

"God banished religious rivalry and jealousy from this land of ours," he said. "The sooner we forget these prejudices, the happier this land will be."

WHALE SHIPS IN WILKINS SEARCH

Australia and New Zealand Plan to Aid Explorer Not Heard From for 8 Days

By VICTOR OLSEN,
Wireless Operator of the Wilkins-Hearst Antarctic Expedition at Deception Island.

DECEPTION ISLAND, Antarctica, Feb. 8.—(Via Deception Island Base Station and KUP, San Francisco Examiner Wireless Station.)—All whalers in the vast sea of the ice that surrounds the South polar region are turning their attention to Capt. Sir Hubert Wilkins, in an effort to locate that intrepid explorer.

With the passing of another day and word of Capt. Wilkins still lacking, every vessel equipped with radio and thus knowing of the supposed plight of the head of the Wilkins-Hearst expedition, has dropped every other pursuit and turned their entire attention to locating the missing party.

FORESAW TROUBLE

That Capt. Wilkins foresaw the possibility of trouble in attempting the airplane flight across the under cap of the world is shown by his dispatch before setting forth on the present trip. He set out for some point west of Peter Island and hoped to make two or three flights from the edge of the ice pack in that vicinity. If he could find suitable ice for skiis he planned to fly the Ross Sea, he said.

In the last dispatch he sent before he left Capt. Wilkins said:

"Rescue in case of accident would now be difficult but since delay has been unavoidable, it is worth making the effort."

DRY RULE SHIFT UP TODAY

man of the Judiciary Sub-committee, handling the Crime Commission's "juryless trial" bill, announced that other members of the committee will back him in proposed amendments to the Jones "five and ten law" passed last year by Congress. Dean Roscow Pound, of the Law Enforcement Commission, approved the move.

CUTS PENALTIES

The new bill, Christopherson said, will provide a maximum fine of $500 and six months' imprisonment for "casual or petty" violations which include possession, and those who do not habitually sell liquor.

He asserted the Jones law, which provided a maximum fine of $10,000 and five years' imprisonment for any prohibition violation, was enacted by Congress without consideration.

Congressional anti-prohibitionists were preparing for the drive to be inaugurated before the House Judiciary Committee on February 12 for modification or repeal of the Volstead act, a national referendum on prohibition and legalizing of 2.75 per cent beer.

They were encouraged by the demonstration given in the House for Representative James M. Beck (Rep.), of Pennsylvania, former solicitor general, who emerged as a wet leader.

Wets were considering a concerted movement to force a statement from the law enforcement commission on the possibility of complete, effective prohibition enforcement.

BAUMES 'LIFE' LAW RAKED

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(INS.)—A movement for modification or repeal of the Baumes laws, under which a fourth offender in New York must be sentenced to life imprisonment, was underway today.

Aroused by the case of Ruth St. Clair, a fourth offender sentenced to life in prison for shoplifting, feminists, writers and others joined in the movement.

Judge Max S. Levine, who sentenced Mrs. St. Clair, said he would propose that Gov. Roosevelt appoint a commission to study the cases of 100 persons now serving life terms which were mandatory under the Baumes laws. The judge said he "would have preferred to sentence Mrs. St. Clair to about 10 years."

Judge Levine said after proper investigation Gov. Roosevelt should commute the sentences of those now serving life who "do not deserve that sentence."

REID FLIES TRIO FROM ICE PACK

NORTH CAPE, Siberia, via Point Barrow Alaska, by Radio and Cable, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Capt. Pat Reid, who took off from here yesterday with Miss Marion Swenson, Seattle high school girl; her father, Olaf Swenson, and Capt. Milovzorov as passengers, landed at Teller, Alaska, today after a flight of about four hours. Miss Swenson radioed from Teller. They took off from North Cape at 10 a. m.

The Swensons had been marooned for several months on the fur trading ship Nanuk, icebound at North Cape, while Capt. Milovzorov has been icebound here aboard the Russian ship Stavropol, of which he is master. Swenson is head of the Swenson Fur Trading Company, which owns the Nanuk.

Capt. Reid flew one of the Fairchild planes sent North to engage in the search for Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, who were lost November 9 while attempting a flight to the Nanuk. The wreckage of their plane was found recently 90 miles southeast of North Cape but their bodies have not been recovered.

PLANE CARRIER DISPUTE SEEN

BRITISH ADVANTAGE

Great Britain has six aircraft carriers, the Hermes, Eagle, Argus, Furious, Courageous and Glorious. Of these six, only the Courageous and Glorious, which are of about 22,500 tons each, were constructed after Nov. 12, 1921. The other four could be replaced by more modern craft at any time improvement in design warranted such a step.

Of the three American aircraft carriers, the Lexington, Saratoga, and Langley, now in operation and one which has been authorized and appropriated for, only the Langley falls into the experimental class.

Should naval architects design a perfect aircraft carrier tomorrow, under the terms of the Washington treaty, the United States would not be permitted for another 12 or 15 years to scrap the approximately 66,000 tons represented by the Lexington and Saratoga and build the improved type of carrier.

CAPITAL DISAPPOINTED

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(INS.)—A wave of disappointment swept Congress over the Stimson proposal for naval limitation, but leaders of both major parties today expressed a hope the American plan would lead to a new naval accord at London.

The Stimson plan, was described as valuable chiefly because it would eliminate naval competition for a definite period between the five great naval powers. This approbation was somewhat tempered by implied criticism that the plan would fail real reduction in naval armaments and would increase the cost of the American navy to the people of the United States.

LEADERS GIVE VIEWS

The view of administration leaders was expressed by Representative Burton L. French (Rep.), of Idaho, who commands the appropriations subcommittee dealing with naval appropriations.

"The effect of the program would not mean substantial reduction in money cost to the American people, but would check further expansions," said French. "Such a program would remove competition in different types of craft, which, in itself, is fundamental."

Senate leaders expressed a belief that any treaty, growing out of the Stimson plan, would be ratified by the upper branch of Congress. Senator William E. Borah (Rep.), of Idaho, chairman of the Senate foreign relations committee, indicated only a half-hearted approval of the Stimson plan.

3 DIE HUNTING BODIES IN MINE

SALT LAKE CITY, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Three members of a rescue party were killed by a cave-in in the Standard Coal Company mine at Standardville late last night, reports to F. A. Sweet, president of the company, said today.

The men were searching for the bodies of three men still in the mine following the explosion Thursday, which took 20 lives. Members of the rescue party who were killed, are John R. Lowman, Walter Henderson and Clarence A. Smith.

Authorities today began an investigation into the gas explosion which shattered the mine.

Rescue crews from adjoining mines yesterday managed to bring five of the 29 trapped men to the surface before the deadly fumes could reach them. Four others escaped to the surface Thursday night shortly after the explosion.

HOPPER AGAIN DOES 'CASEY'

De Wolf Hopper, the man who immortalized "Casey at the Bat," again recited his entertaining lines yesterday at the William Penn Hotel for a group of friends and newspapermen in his first Pittsburgh visit of the past few years.

The same unquenchable fire that has stood him in such good stead for more than a half century on the stage was still apparent as the "Grand Old Man" told of the rise and fall of Casey once more.

Hopper came here to speak at the testimonial banquet tendered last night to Charles H. Landefeld, illustrious potentate of Syria Temple, which was held in the William Penn. He has still the same vibrant personality that has endeared him to the hearts of millions during his 12 years of life.

"Friendship and fraternity are my wholesome attributes of life," Hopper says, "and I owe them to my mother."

The actor was accompanied here by the latest Mrs. Hopper, who before her marriage was Lillian Glaser, vaudeville and concert singer. Edna Wallace Hopper, the "perennial flapper" and beauty culturist, was his first spouse.

Lindy Halted in Glider Flights by Bad Weather

LINDBERGH CAMP, Tehachapi Mountains, Cal., Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Forestalled by unfavorable wind conditions in attempts to make anything except very short flights, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today temporarily deserted his experimental glider camp here.

After a disappointing experience just before midnight last night, when his boyish enthusiasm over an anticipated extensive night flight was dashed at the last minute by an unfavorable weather report, the colonel packed up and returned to Los Angeles. He intimated that he would make no further glider tests here for an indefinite period, but ordered that the camp be maintained in readiness for use in the event favorable wind conditions develop.

Lindbergh today planned to put his new low-winged monoplane speed ship, custom built for Jim and Mrs. Lindbergh at Burbank, Cal., through its paces in Department of Commerce license tests, later, his associates believe he may scout around for a more favorable glider proving ground if conditions here do not improve.

MR. AND MRS. AL LITZENBURG

The Litzenburgs at Bettis Field as they awaited their honeymoon take-off for Spokane, Wash. They married yesterday.

LANDS PLANE, HIES TO ALTAR

Al Litzenburg swung his two-seated plane onto the landing apron of Bettis Field yesterday, changed clothes and made his way by auto to the East Liberty Presbyterian Church.

There Miss Nellie Scott, of Clairton, was waiting, with the Rev. W. P. Reber, associate minister, anxious to serve.

Today Mr. and Mrs. Litzenburg are waiting for the clouds to lift. The ship, formerly "Miss Erie," now the "Mr. and Mrs." is fueled. The folks out in Spokane are waiting to meet the bride. All they need for an airplane honeymoon is good visibility weather.

Litzenburg, well known in aviation circles here, was formerly pilot of the big tri-motor that last summer sailed over the city from Bettis Field. He is now chief pilot at the Mid-City airport, Hudson, Ohio.

While Dr. Reber performed the ceremony, Mrs. George Klewer, of Duquesne, and D. Barr Peat, manager of the Mid-City port, served as attendants. The newly-weds expected to fly out on their transcontinental honeymoon yesterday afternoon, but misty weather and poor visibility made starting precarious. They will live in Hudson.

Christian Scientist Lectures at Nixon

John Randall Dunn, of Boston, member of the Board of Lectureship of the Mother Church, spoke on "Doing One's Part" before members of the Christian Science Church, in the Nixon Theater at noon yesterday. Members of the faith as well as friends packed the theater to overflowing. The speaker urged the people to eliminate a few "gets" and acquire more "gives." He contended that too many are so engrossed in their own misery that they are not giving to their less fortunate brethren sufficient thought.

Canon City Warden Ill, Army Rule On

CANON CITY, Col., Feb. 8.—(AP.)—A sudden collapse of Warden F. E. Crawford, who became ill late last night and was taken to a hospital, gave new strength today to the military rule of Col Patrick J. Hamrock, new "dictator of the state penitentiary."

The newly appointed "special deputy warden," chosen to put down disorders that have stirred the institution for months, was expected to assume complete control over the prison during the warden's illness.

HEARING ENDED ON WASSON

With the closing of the hearing in the disbarment proceedings against former Judge Henry G. Wasson by a special committee of the State Bar late yesterday, attorneys in the case were given three weeks in which to submit exhibits and file briefs. The next step will be the report of the committee to the board of grievance of the bar. It was stated that no action had been taken in the case of Attorney George H. Calvert, against whom complaint also had been made, but who could not appear on account of illness.

It was predicted that considerable time would elapse before the final decision in the case, which is one of the first on record in Pennsylvania. When the matter is placed before the board of governance, exceptions may be taken and arguments held before it reaches the Supreme Court. Subsequent procedure would be decided by the Supreme Court.

ASSASSINATIONS SPREAD ALARM IN BRAZIL

Vice President Recovering From Wounds; Political Situation Called Tense

International News Service.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 8.—With the presidential elections less than a month away, an undercurrent of uneasiness was felt in Brazilian political circles today following the shooting of Vice President Fernando Mello Vianna while making a political speech at Montes Claros, Minas Geraes.

Three bullets from the gun of a supposed political opponent entered the neck and head of Dr. Mello Vianna. Five other persons, including the vice president's private secretary, were killed and 14 wounded in the melee that followed, according to dispatches received here today.

The vice president was removed to a hospital in Bello Horizonte, capital of the Minas Garaes. It was stated his wounds were not critical and that he would recover, although it could not be stated definitely how soon he could essay the journey back to this city, more than 400 miles away.

Officials here refused to state definitely today whether or not martial law had been or would be declared in the State of Minas Geraes, which is extremely important in Brazil from a political standpoint.

Dr. Mello Vianna, who is leader of the Conservative party in Minas Geraes, had gone there to make a round of political speeches. As he began a speech in Montes Claros, one of the strongholds of the opposition party, someone fired at him from a nearby house. A riot followed. It was reported one woman was among those wounded.

ARREST DRY AID AS DRUNK

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—(INS.)—Samuel R. Young, lawyer and secretary of one of Congress' prohibitionists, Representative Percy E. Quin, (Dem.), of McComb, Miss., today was awaiting trial in police court on a charge of operating an automobile while drunk.

The charge was preferred after his automobile and a machine driven by Charles S. Walters, crashed near the Capitol grounds last night. The drivers were not hurt, but Mrs. Walters, riding in her husband's automobile, was so badly cut and bruised she received treatment at a hospital. Both automobiles were badly damaged and had to be towed away.

Young was held at the precinct station until a professional bondsman posted $1,000 for his appearance when his case is called. Before becoming Quin's secretary he held a similar position with Senator Pat Harrison, (Dem.), of Mississippi.

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(INS.)—While funeral services were planned today for Jane Gibson, chief witness in the famous Hall-Mills murder trial, it was denied that Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, against whom Mrs. Gibson testified at the trial, had sent a "note of forgiveness" to Mrs. Gibson just before she died. Bathman served in the Union army during the Civil War and then settled in Chattanooga.

Church's Ex-Wife Sails, Expects Meeting Abroad

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Feb. 8. — (AP.) — Mrs. Agnes Aurelia Church, former wife of Francois L. Church, heir to the fortune of Elihu Church, baking soda manufacturer, left here with her aunt, Mrs. Winifred Bateman, for a round-the-world voyage on the liner President Fillmore.

She said she expected to meet her former husband in Europe.

The former Brooklyn, N. Y., girl obtained a divorce at Reno, Nev., last December on the ground of non-support. Mrs. Church was understood to have had $200,000 conferred upon her as a divorce settlement, but shortly afterward declared she and her former husband were still in love. She blamed his family for the separation and asserted she had obtained the divorce against her will.

Before sailing Mrs. Church said she was leaving most of "the money the Churches settled on me" in a San Francisco bank as a "margin of safety against the chances of the future."

W. HOMESTEAD COUNCIL IN ROW

Strife broke out in West Homestead Borough Council last night when Councilman Thomas John, former president, but recently leader of the minority faction, quit the chamber, throwing down the gauntlet to President C. G. Beatty, Richard H. Lawry, H. V. Myers and J. N. Dean, the latter also serving as borough secretary. John threatened he "would have all business transacted declared null and void."

The cause of the furor was the authorization by council for a loan of $20,000 from a Homestead bank for current expenses. John thought half that amount sufficient.

Council voted to make an agreement with the South Pittsburgh Water Company to furnish water to the borough, members having objected to a boost of two cents a thousand gallons on Homestead water.

Another difference of opinion arose when a Mesta Machine Company bill was presented for $496 for placing steps from Eighth to Doyle avenues. Councilman Lawry said the work was not authorized. Councilman John said it was. Council ordered the accounts and claims committee and borough auditors to investigate all amounts expended in West Homestead in 1929.

'CHAIR' URGED FOR BLONDE

BEAVER FALLS, Pa., Feb. 8.—"If Irene Schroeder, blonde trigger woman, now held in the Lawrence County jail, is found guilty of the murder of Corp. Brady Paul, she should be made to expiate her crime in the electric chair," declared Capt. P. J. Dorr, of Harrisburg, deputy superintend of the State Highway Patrol, speaking at a safety meeting here sponsored by the Beaver County Safety Council.

Capt. Dorr charged that money was being contributed by the underworld for the defense of the woman and was being sent her at the Lawrence County jail and that already she had employed four of the best criminal attorneys in the tri-state district.

Dorr said that Paul was killed because he obeyed the rules and traditions of the Highway Patrol and endeavored to be polite to a motorist who had not been proved guilty of an offense.

WOMAN KILLED, GEMS STOLEN

BELLEVILLE, N. J., Feb. 8.—(AP.)—An attempt to save her jewels from robbers was believed by police today to have caused the strangling to death of 63-year-old Mrs. Harriet Conley.

The aged woman was found in the foyer of her home, a deep wound in the back of her head and a towel twisted tightly about her neck. Police said jewels valued at more than $1,000 were missing.

The body was found by her granddaughter, Majorie Davis, 15, daughter of George Davis of St. Paul, Minn., upon her return home from school. The woman's husband is connected with a Paterson, N. J., department store.

WITHERS FREED OF ALIMONY

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Grant Withers, screen actor who recently eloped with Loretta Young, 17-year-old film star, was released today from the burden of $60 monthly alimony payments to his first wife, who has been suing for an increase to $300.

Superior Judge Walter Guerin sustained Withers in his view that, since his mother instituted the annulment petition that dissolved his marriage to Mrs. Inez Withers in 1925, the petition for an increase in payments filed against him was illegal and moreover that the original $60 order was void on the same grounds.

When Withers and Miss Young returned here from Yuma, Ariz., where they were married, Mrs. George U. Belzer, the bride's mother, persuaded them to separate and filed annulment proceedings, the actress, however, announced that she was going to stay married to Withers, and the annulment suit was dropped.

Judge Guerin said the first Mrs. Withers might institute proceedings asking for an entirely new alimony order.

POLICE MAKE WHOLESALE ARRESTS

Murder and 20 Robberies Mark Day as Secret Board Forms to Fight Gangs

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.—(INS.)—While the crime problem of Chicago was still being solved on paper today and by investigating committees, one shooting, a daring burglary and more than 20 robberies sent detective squads scurrying to all parts of the city.

Police Commissioner William Russell, in a desperate attempt to stave off the crime wave, resolved to arrest every known hoodlum, gunman and racketeer on sight, put them in jail and keep them there until they are released on writs of habeas corpus.

Squads swooped down on a boxing show here last night and arrested seven men, five of whom were released. Hoodlums today with police records were being rounded up in every section of Chicago and carried to the bureau of identification.

ARRESTS THREATENED

"I'll arrest them so often they will be glad to leave Chicago," said Russell grimly. "And when they leave the court with a discharge, we'll arrest them as they walk out the door."

Dissatisfied with the results obtained by police in their war upon criminals, the Chicago Association of Commerce held a meeting which was attended by Commissioner of Police Russell and State's Attorney John A. Swanson, at which it was decided to appoint a "citizens' of courage and action" committee to study the crime problem in the city.

While this body was being selected, Pasquale Calabrese fell to the floor of his home today, writhing with perhaps mortal bullet wounds, said to have been inflicted by two women with whom he quarreled. Calabrese died several hours after police were called. When the officers arrived the women had fled.

BANDITS ACTIVE

Police raided the home of Erwin Wagner, millionaire head of a sign company, bound and gagged Wagner's two children, Frank, 18, and Louise, 16, and escaped with jewelry and money, the value of which was unknown.

The "stickup" victim list increased steadily during the night and today. Bandits warred upon drug stores, groceries, show stores and taxicab drivers.

The "strip" bandits, a man and a woman, were again busy, robbing two taxicab drivers and forcing them to disrobe so as to foil pursuit.

BUILDING SINKS, PERILS CROWDS

Police and workmen today were protecting crowds from the possible collapse of a three-story brick building in the heart of East Liberty—Penn and Center avenues.

The rear wall of the building sank six inches late yesterday while workmen were tearing down the whole affair. Cracks were caused in the other walls.

Hundreds of pedestrians were passing the corner when the wall sank, but none seemed to notice. Today repairmen were bracing the entire structure, which is at 6124-30 Penn avenue.

The street car stop at the corner was eliminated for the time being, although the workmen were confident the braces would hold the building.

The structure, which has been vacant for months, is being torn down to make way for a new building.

Love Plea Fails to Save Man Who Shot Girl

Attorney Louis Little tried hard to explain a love quarrel, which had bullets as punctuation marks.

In a plea to Judge Harry H. Rowand, Little asked parole, or at least a light sentence, for Richard P. O'Neil, of 128 North Thirteenth street, Homestead, when the latter pleaded guilty in Criminal Court to felonious assault and battery. Elizabeth Bobacik, of 1406 West street, Homestead, was the victim.

"I have never been in love," said Attorney Little, "but Your Honor and the District Attorney have been, as evidenced by your both being married, and I think you can understand why this defendant, when his girl told him she was through with him, in desperation shot and wounded her."

"Yes, and it's lucky he isn't here facing a charge of murder," dryly observed Judge Rowand, who sentenced O'Neil to serve 9 to 24 months in the workhouse.

The shooting occurred December 14 in Shady avenue, near where the girl was employed as a domestic. She has recovered from a bullet wound in the chest.

Rolling Rock Dance Like Old Print

JUST for a second or two at the Rolling Rock Hunt dinner dance last night in the Pittsburgh Golf Club I had the feeling that I was looking at an old print of a colonial ball. An orchestra playing stirring music, the scarlet evening coats of the men, and the trailing, brilliantly colored gowns of the women all helped to give this momentary impression.

Even though the scene belonged to the twentieth century instead of the eighteenth, it was none the less picturesque. And the many lovely gowns of the present mode added varied colors to the vivid scene.

The men's coats of scarlet had lapels of blue satin, for you know the hunt colors are scarlet and blue.

Among the first to arrive last evening was Mrs. Frances Burke Rodgers, who looked charming in a sweeping gown of Edith blue crepe with a wide border of deeper blue forming an uneven hemline. Her slippers were of blue satin, and her small evening bag was of moire in the same shade of blue. And she wore a smart evening wrap of black velvet with novel cape sleeves and a scarf collar of the same material. And I thought Mrs. Dorwin J. Donnelly's gown was particularly interesting. It was fashioned of black velvet with a deep v-decolletage in the back and a brief cape. And the skirt of tiered velvet gave a petal effect, and had a small train. And I almost forgot to mention that a scarlet flower marking the back decolletage of the gown was the only color note in her costume.

The Reginald Macdonalds and their brother, Dr. Allan Macdonald, of England, of course, who is their house guest just now, were among the early arrivals. And Mrs. Macdonald wore a very long [illegible] of black chiffon and tulle. [illegible] the way black was as popular as ever last night. Mrs. Lennon T. Patterson chose a black dress, too, developed in lace. And she wore orchids.

And Mrs. Alan Magee Scaife was superb in a simple gown of rose and gold lame, reaching the instep.

And Mrs. John W. Lawrence was wearing black chiffon and Jane Allderdice aquamarine blue crepe with green slippers.

One of the debutantes of the season, Laura Evans, looked distinctive in a gown of chanel red lace fashioned with a flounced skirt and an interesting fichu of the same material. And, of course, her slippers matched her gown.

Louise Reed wore green satin and Mrs. Herbert A. May dahlia crepe. Her gown was pleated snugly over the hips and had a long full skirt.

Mrs. Richard Beatty Mellon, who arrived very late with Mr. Mellon, wore chanel red lace and a brocaded metal cloth wrap with sables. And the Arthur P. Woolfolks I saw, too, with Mrs. Woolfolk wearing black chiffon and an interesting wrap of garnet red velvet with a band of sable marking the hip line.

Very striking was a gown of white panne satin worn by Mrs. T. M. Jones, III. Smart peplums of the same material marked the h[illegible] line, and the long skirt ended in a train.

Mrs. Joseph W. Scribner chose a rose chiffon gown; Mrs. Russell Love wore black chiffon, as did Mrs. George Singer Ebbert and Mrs. Thomas Eddy.

Anne Scott, who arrived with her fiance, John H. Ricketson III, wore peacock blue crepe with a high waistline and an especially long skirt.

Mrs. James P. McKinney's gown was of dark red lace, and Mrs. William R. Thomas, of Johnstown, wore flesh chiffon, embroidered in brilliants, and Mrs. George McCook, brown lace.

An interesting gown of black lace over eggshell satin was worn by Louise Cook, of Johnstown.

Spring flowers, such as jonquils and marigolds and snapdragons in amber glass bowls and vases and pussywillows decorated the tables, lighted by yellow tapers in amber glass holders.

GEORGE R. BEDINGER, of Philadelphia, state director of charities, will address the Woman's Alliance of the First Unitarian Church at its meeting Wednesday morning.

Woman'sCity Club Fetes Leiber

MORE than 125 members and guests of the Woman's City Club were presented yesterday at the luncheon given by the club for Fritz Leiber, Shakespearean star, and his wife, Virginia Bronson. George Seibel, literary and dramatic critic of the Sun-Telegraph, introduced Mr. Leiber as the foremost actor of his time, measuring him, as he said all actors have been measured, according to the consistency and truthfulness of their interpretations of Hamlet.

Mr. Leiber's informal talk was a delight, not only for the quality of its entertainment and its humor, but for the sincerity and unassuming modesty that were so much a part of it. It is silly to talk of "reviving Shakespeare," the player said, because he has never been dead in spite of all the bad acting of his plays. Shakespeare, despite his anachronisms, his errors, and denials of his own plots, has a hold on human emotions and an understanding of human thought that make reality shine through. Shakespeare is primarily a playwright and one can forget his great literary genius. He wrote not to confound people after he was dead, but for the amusement of his own generation. It is a mistake to put Shakespeare on a pedestal. One can forget about the psychology of his lines and know only his characters, the speaker added.

An informal reception was held for Mr. and Mrs. Leiber at the close of the luncheon. Mrs. Cooke Bausmann, program chairman, standing in line with them.

SPRING SUITS ENGAGE ATTENTION OF ATELIERS

Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, Feb. 8.—Skirt designing must be among the "pieceful arts" that we hear so much about. For the skirt of the smart suit or ensemble as it appears this season is a triumph of cleverly contrived and placed "empiecements," to employ the technical term. Diagonal piecings are especially liked and are much featured on the skirts of sports ensembles. The skirt this year is contributing much to the success and interest of the suit. It has ceased to be just a covering and now bears a yoke and other pleasant burdens lightly and with charm. If you will study the new clothes you will see much of interest in the various methods employed by different designers to create a skirt that has that "different" note that can "make" the simplest garment.

The practical side of the skirt has not been neglected, and the various treatments employed help to maintain freedom of movement and ease. Skirts designed for sports and walking suits remain at a sensible length, and necessary width is secured by cleverly grouped pleats, and circular flares.

THERE is a hint of spring in the two very smart suits depicted here. The first is from Martial et Armand and is both practical and pleasing to look upon and wear. The coat and skirt are of black cheviot tweed. The shawl collar does double duty as it forms a scarf at one side that may be thrown over the opposite shoulder if the jacket is worn closed. Set on a deep diagonal yoke, the circular flare of the skirt is low in position, as is the rule just now. An outside jumper of red, black and beige tweed-jersey is worn with the suit and is belted with black leather. A bright touch is introduced by the belt buckle which is of enamel in matching colors.

THERE is an extraordinary amount of charm and interest about the second suit which is from Mary Nowitzy, famous for her beach clothes and pajamas, and eminent in the field of sports clothes. The ensemble shown here is of beige, gray and green jersey in a heavy tweed-like knit. The long coat cut on lines that are severely smart, is trimmed with unplucked seal. The skirt will repay a moment's study, for it is subtly different and in marked contrast to the simplicity of the jacket. It is cut in diagonal piecings with a buttoned yoke and a zig-zag hem-line that is very new.

LOVEJOY

Oglebay Sees Lovejoy and Voices Disapproval

CHAPTER XXVIII

STEVE was not in his office.

"He'll be down in about a half hour," said the girl who answered his telephone.

"When he comes in please ask him to call Mrs. Nicholson, and tell him that it's important," Lovejoy told her, and she gave her the number of the beauty shop.

"I'm expecting an important telephone message," she said to the girl at the appointment desk. "When it comes please let me know. I'm Mrs. Nicholson."

"Yes, I remember you, Mrs. Nicholson," the girl answered with a quick smile. "You're Mrs. Alderson's friend, aren't you?"

It was Aline who had brought Lovejoy to Darby and Johansson's in the first place.

"They'll do wonders for you," she had said to her. "They touch up my hair once a month—and they give me a milk pack every week of my life. You ought to have your hair rinsed with henna to make it just a little redder, Lovejoy. You'd be a knock-out with red hair."

Lovejoy had scorned the idea at the time.

But it had kept coming back to her . . . . Perhaps it would improve her looks to have a henna rinse. To have her hair "brightened up" just the least bit.

"Could I have a shampoo and a henna rinse after my manicure?" she asked the appointment-girl suddenly.

The girl nodded and shouted for another girl named Betty.

Betty was small and dark and pretty. Her hair had the gloss and color of ripe chestnuts, and it looked as if it never had had any henna or curling irons on it.

She said that she had time to give Lovejoy a rinse, and she went to work in a most business-like manner.

By half past eleven Lovejoy's lovely hair was two shades redder than it ever had been before, and the effect was startling. Her skin seemed whiter than usual and her eyebrows and her thick lashes looked as black as jet.

Calls on Steve

"Didn't anyone telephone for me?" she asked the girl at the appointment desk, glancing down at the little watch on her wrist.

It was ten minutes before twelve now. Surely Steven must have come down to his office by this time.

The girl shook her elaborately-waved head. "No one called for you," she said blankly.

Steve's office was in the Meridian Building, only two blocks away.

On her way there Lovejoy stopped in at a flower shop and paid three dollars for a little bunch of white gardenias for the front of her new green linen coat.

There was a full length mirror in the shop. She stood before it while the clerk was getting the gardenias for her and smiled at her reflection. . . . The red hair surely was an improvement, she told herself—especially against the background of her green hat and suit.

There always are moments in every woman's life when she feels pretty.

And Lovejoy never had been so sure of her own beauty as she was that noon when she walked into Steve Oglebay's office.

His office girl was at her desk in the middle of the room. Beyond her the door of Steve's private office stood open and Steve was standing with his back to it, staring out of the window.

He swung around at the sound of her voice and stood waiting for her, his hands in his pockets and an odd puzzled look on his face.

He Disapproves

"I left word here for you to call me at Darby's," Lovejoy said, coming into the room and closing the door behind her.

"I know you did," Steve answered after a moment.

He did not smile and he did not ask her to sit down. He just stood there against the bright light from the windows looking at her.

"Weren't you going to call me?" Lovejoy asked him.

He shook his head.

"Why not?"

Steve pulled his hands out of his pockets and sat down on the corner of his desk.

"Well," he said slowly, measuring his words, "this sort of thing isn't in my line. A lot of fellows do play around with married women and think it's okeh but—well, it just isn't in my line."

He spoke awkwardly, but his eyes met hers levelly and coolly. She saw that he meant what he was saying and that he had thought it all out and was very sure of himself.

"But isn't it rather late in the day to decide that?" Lovejoy asked him. "This isn't the first time you and I have met each other without letting anyone know about it, Steve—"

"I know, I know," he interrupted her. "But it's the last time, Lovejoy. You see all this winter you've been telling me how unhappy you were with your husband and letting me think that you were going to leave him—and all winter I've been failing for it."

Lovejoy felt a hot flush coming up into her face.

"But a woman who's unhappy with her husband doesn't move into a new house with him and buy a lot of new furniture—not if she's planning to divorce him, at any rate." Steve's slow deep voice went on. "And I'm not messing around with any married women, thank you."

Phones Home

"You mean that you won't have anything to do with me so long as I live with Tom?" Lovejoy asked him. "I was only going to ask you to take me to the movies or for a drive or something like that, Steve."

He didn't say a word.

"Steve, we can't talk all this over in this office," she went on after a second. "Put on your hat and let's go away out in the country somewhere and thresh it out . . . Steve, I don't want you to think I've been playing with you just for the fun there was in it. Steve, you know how much I think of you."

She put her head to one side and walked across the floor to him. She hated to lose him this way, and she wasn't going to if she could help it.

"I'm going to telephone the house and see if the baby's all right," she said, her hands on his coat sleeves. "And then we'll get into your car and go somewhere. Won't we, Steve?"

He did not try to stop her when she picked up the telephone from the desk and gave the number of the new house.

Norrie answered the telephone.

"I just called to see if everything was all right," Lovejoy said to her.

"Everything's just fine!" Norrie's voice was light and it sounded as if Norrie was filled just then with the joy of living. "Tom came home for lunch a few minutes ago. I'm putting the baby down for his nap, and then I'm going to get a sandwich ready for Tom. I've ordered all the things for his party tonight."

Visions Pair

"Goodby," said Lovejoy, and without another word she hung up.

"Tom's having a cozy little lunch at home with Norrie Shane," she said to Steve with a hard little laugh, "so I guess it's not so wicked for you and me to be here together."

She shut her eyes for just a second . . . She could picture Tom and Norrie having lunch together at home. She could see the little cream-colored breakfast room with its flowered chintz curtains and its little table set with the new blue-and-cream dishes.

Norrie would be serving the sandwiches and pouring iced tea into the new amber tumblers with their gold rims—Norrie, smiling and sweet-faced and eager in her crisp white clothes.

"Well, let's go," Steve's voice brought her out of her dream and back to the office. He had his hat in his hand and his light overcoat over his arm.

Fay King Throws Spotlight on 'Amorous Recrudescence' of Today

By FAY KING

MANY elderly ladies feel a sudden sympathetic interest in struggling YOUNG men.

Many elderly gentlemen also begin to feel very philanthropic toward ambitious YOUNG women.

This concern in aspiring youth might be most worthy and admirable if it were not so often too personal.

But one observes these elderly patrons usually on hand to see that their young proteges do not mingle romantically with other attractive contemporary youth.

This interest often ends in these elderly patrons marrying their young proteges, or making them the sole beneficiary of new wills, cutting off rightful heirs.

Alienists classify this late interest in the welfare of young patrons of opposite sex as "amorous recrudescence."

Greedy young adventurers find them easy prey, but sincere youth flees from amorous old fossils.

Love's Reawakening

Continuation of Love's Awakening

By ADELE GARRISON

A Wife's Struggle Against Jealousy

THERE is no calm so perfect in its stillness as that which follows a storm, no peace so satisfying as that which comes after one's soul has been racked with pain.

These are the truths, hoary with age, that I, Madge Graham, am realizing today. I am conning them over and over as a child does a catechism, while I tremulously contemplate a renaissance of the marital happiness which I had feared was lost to me forever.

I find it difficult to comprehend this unexpected joy which has come to me after long months of estrangement. Unfolding swiftly before me is a memory panorama of fierce anger—almost hatred—against my husband for his terrible doubt of me just before Grace Draper's suicide, of the calmness, amounting to indifference toward Dicky into which my numbed emotions settled after that racking agony, and of my slow but sure awakening to the fact that my affection for my husband is neither ashes nor embers, but a steady flame.

But I am not listening to the voice of experience just now, and I am drawing a heavy curtain over my panorama of memory pictures. All that I wish to remember is the rough tenderness of Dicky's voice when after an episode fraught with physical danger to both of us, he somewhat incoherently muttered both apology and assurance of his love for me, and stammered:

"Don't you think we could, you could—?"

My answer was a prompt affirmative, and its aftermath a bringing back of such happiness to me as I had deemed impossible of return. It is a happiness which has not been marred by jealousy, by a quarrel, or even by a minor disagreement in the weeks which have passed since that day, and I find myself wondering curiously when the first break in my peace will come, and what will be the occasion for it.

There are six of us here at the hotel for the winter. Dicky and I and Mary Harrison, my husband's rarely lovely young niece, are in our apartment, and in the suite next to us, so near that it is almost like sharing a single home, are domiciled our best friends, Harry and Lillian Underwood, and Noel Veritzen, the young son of Philip Veritzen, most famous theatrical producer in the country, and, incidentally, my employer.

Marion Morton, Lillian's winsome young daughter, is still at the Whitney School in New Jersey to which Lillian and I took her last Autumn with many misgivings because of her roommate, Carolyn Brixton. Not that either of us disapproves of the lovable little hoyden who is still Marion's "roomie." She has as warm a place in our hearts as has her brother, Ronald. Yale freshman and Marion's devoted admirer, and her mother, beautiful, stately Helena Brixton, who in the days of their youth was Lillian's nearest friend. But both Lillian and I distrust Samuel Brixton, Helena's husband, and the children's stepfather, though they bear his name, as much as we fear his half-brother, Charles Owen, because of former unpleasant, almost sinister happenings connected with them. However, they are so far away from us and from Marion in their western home, that Lillian's misgivings concerning them are not as lively as they would be were either man living close to us.

It has been as peaceful for Lillian, this stretch of late Autumn and early Winter, as it has been for me. Happy and contented in her reunion with the husband so long estranged from her, she has been especially blissful in the knowledge that her idolized daughter no longer harbors the loathing and angry jealousy of her stepfather which once was Marion's. The young girl has not the romantic affection for Harry Underwood which she cherished for her "Uncle Robert" Savarin, the famous artist whom she used to beg her mother to marry, but I can see that her liking for her big, jolly stepfather is steady and genuine in its growth.

My own domestic problems are giving me no cause for troubled thought. Instead I am contemplating them with thankful content. My small son, ordered to remain in the country for the winter, is busy and contented in the trained care of Katherine Bickett, my brother-cousin's wife, who has promised to care for my boy during the period of my contract with Philip Veritzen. Dicky's mother and my father also at "The Farm," our loved country home, vie in devotion to my little lad, while our faithful Jim and Katie take care of all of them.

But we all have a common worry, a problem which engages the sympathies of all of us, and that is the dilemma which confronts Mary Harrison. Dicky's niece and young Noel Veritzen, who adores her Noel's father. Philip Veritzen is still absent upon the journey which he began in his rage at the thwarting of his absurd ambition to marry Noel to Princess Olina of Transvania. That lovely royal fugitive, whose peril together with that of Prince Georges, heir to the throne of Trees, brought such exciting adventure into our lives last summer and autumn, has gone back to her home, betrothed to Georges, now King of Trees. But Noel and Mary also promised to each other and smiling with tender amusement over the roles they played in the "international romance," have no such settled future.

Philip Veritzen's last act before going away leaving his interests in Harry Underwood's hands and mine, was to withdraw all financial support from his son and revoke the promise he had made to make Mary the "most famous Veritzen star." Mary is marking time by going on with her studies and acting as my secretary while Noel is working hard with me at the musical drama for which he has written the music, and to which I am endeavoring to add the libretto.

I know, however, that it is fortunate for my own happiness that Philip Veritzen has gone temporarily out of my life. Dicky's dislike of my employer and his jealousy of him are so strong that whenever he sees the great producer he turns sulky even though there be not the slightest cause for his dolor. But he has not mentioned Mr. Veritzen's name since the great man disappeared, and with equal consideration—or caution—I have refrained from speaking of Edith Fairfax, Dicky's partner in his magazine venture, now also absent, called to her home in North Carolina by the illness of her great-aunt, Dora Paige, whom she idolizes. We both know, however, that the existence of Edith Fairfax and Philip Veritzen in our lives is a distinct menace to our mutual happiness.

A whirring of the telephone brings me from my reverie and tenses my nerves as I walk toward the instrument.

"Long distance, Mrs. Graham," the switchboard operator says.

"Sag Harbor?" I falter, for I am always more or less on edge with the fear that some accident may befall the family at "The Farm."

"No, Toledo, Ohio."

"But I know no one there," I say. "There must be some mistake."

"I do not think so." The operator is courteously firm. "The party will not give his name, but insists that he must speak with Mrs. Richard Graham. He even said that you might be called Mrs. Margaret Graham. That is correct, is it not?"

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Why I Envy Man

I WANT to be a Big Strong Man—and be "taken care of."

The two parts of the above sentence has not appear to synchronize—but they DO.

Everybody "takes care of" a man. Every woman he meets thinks she was divinely ordained to mother him. All the disagreeable little tasks of life are gently and sweetly lifted from his shoulders by some feminine hand.

Some woman is always coddling him. Some woman is always acting as a human buffer between him and all the uncomfortable situations of daily existence.

If it isn't his wife or his mother or his stenographer, it's his sisters or his landlady or the housemaid—or any of the hundred or so odd women who cross his path through the world.

* * *

Woman may have gained the right to do a man's JOB downtown, but she will never escape from the harrassing little job-lot of jobs, uptown that are supposed to be "woman's." Her own sex won't LET her!

* * *

Perhaps if a hard-working business woman could manage to appear as helpless about little things as a man does, she, too, might be coddled. But she CAN'T. She is too accustomed to waiting on herself.

* * *

Even the hotel maids, to whom a guest is entirely impersonal, make a fine distinction. The maid always hangs up a man's pajamas and puts his soiled linen in the laundry bag.

But a woman's li'l ole nightie can lie there on a chair until she comes in and does her womanly duty and puts it where it belongs.

Does a MAN ever come in and find his dancing pumps right where he kicked them off under the bed?

No, dear heart! Some sweet, tender-hearted little woman will "take care of" all that for him!

Is a man expected to count his own laundry, mend his own hose, pick up his own newspapers, and put his own hankies away in a neat little pile? Does anybody ever suggest that a man might get his own breakfast and make his own hats and sew on his own buttons? I should say NOT!

* * *

The Tired Business Man is tenderly coddled all day long, from the moment he steps out of his shower-bath in the morning until he sinks placidly down on his patent spring mattress at night.

NOT SO DUMB

By HELEN KLUMPH

From Marion Davies' forthcoming All-Talking Picture by Wanda Tuchok and Edwin Justus Mayer, based on the play, "Dulcy" by Marc Connelly and George Kaufman.

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Dulcy is an adorable blonde, always helping people—but usually into trouble. A serious quarrel with Gordon, her fiance, results from her determination to help him put over a business deal. Over his protests she goes to the train with him to meet Forbes, a financier, and invites him and his family to her house for a week-end. Gordon finds, to his horror, that she has a new butler who is an ex-convict, and that she has also invited an utter stranger named Van Dyke, and a scenario writer, Vincent Leach, who was in love with Angela. Gordon faces ruin as Forbes seems irritated upon arrival.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER VI.

THAT terrible moment when the guest of honor wondered if he had let himself in for a week-end of intolerable boredom had passed, and Forbes settled himself comfortably in the garden, at peace with the world, though he did snort "Bridal suite!" disgustedly from time to time.

It was a relief for him to be out here in the stillness, after the week he had put in worrying over his business. Gordon had come out rather hurriedly a moment before, but now was sitting quietly beside him; a restful sort of chap, nothing flighty about him, Forbes decided. But Van Dyke! He couldn't understand Van Dyke! Instead of sitting here comfortably, he was out there on the lawn, practicing golf shots. And the worst of it was that he had no club and no ball.

Van Dyke must have inherited his money; he certainly never made it doing silly things like that, Forbes decided.

He turned idly and glanced through the telescope at his elbow.

"Very interesting," he observed. "I suppose that on a clear day you can see Catalina Island."

This was an opening that Bill, who had just joined them, couldn't resist.

"On a clear day," said he, "You can see into the neighbors' windows."

Bill Praises Forbes

At first, Forbes didn't remember Bill, but gradually it dawned on him that this was the sensible young man who used to call on Angela. He had liked this young Mr. Parker.

"How are you?" he asked with real interest.

"Fine, thanks. I've been reading about you lately. Read one of your ads in the paper tonight," he went on with mock earnestness, which was quite lost on Forbes. "It said that you had made the nation Forbes-conscious. And I believe you have," he added, with what seemed reverence.

Suddenly it dawned on Bill that Forbes was taking him seriously. And enjoying it. Completely at a loss to know how to escape from a situation that appalled him, he gazed off the lawn toward Van Dyke. There, at least, was a man who didn't take himself seriously. Bill set off to join him.

The abruptness of his departure went quite unnoticed by Forbes, who never dealt with more than one thought at a time and who was absorbed in thinking how much he liked Bill. Pity Angela ever let him go.

He looked around for a stiff-backed chair, explaining at length to the quietly intent Gordon that there was nothing he disliked more than sitting in big lounging chair that didn't support his back. It bothered him, his back did. He talked a lot about it, but finally returned to the subject of Bill.

"I like young Parker," he announced, as if he were conferring a knighthood, at least. "No nonsense about him. If there is anything I can't stand it is this frivolous, gad-about way of doing things they have nowadays. They play with life—they don't work."

Gordon nodded in agreement. He would have agreed to anything Forbes said just to keep him in a pleasant mood.

Forbes Raps Youth

Forbes' voice went on and on. Never before had the younger generation been so thoroughly raked over the coals for their habit of appearing to enjoy life. His spell-binding intensity would have been a credit to a politician seeking to sway voters.

"I say that all they want to think about is play. A sensible man has no interest in play. The very word is distasteful to him. And the worst of it is—"

He paused as he saw Dulcy, followed by his wife and daughter, crossing the lawn.

"No more business now," Dulcy called cheerfully. "It's time to play!"

Gordon's face was a study of despair. Oh well, nothing she could say now could make matters worse.

"What I like to do, Mr. Forbes, is to cut loose and just be a child again," she chattered.

Only from Mrs. Forbes did she get any support, and finally she gave up urging a game of hide and seek. Maybe it would be better to wait and spring all her ideas for entertainment after dinner. Mr. Forbes looked so serious. That was a good omen, Dulcy figured; he must be thinking of business. And if he was, now was the time to convince him that he was being unfair to Gordon.

After all but resorting to threats she got Gordon to take Mrs. Forbes and Angela to see the garden. Gordon did manage to whisper "no business!" warningly before he departed, but Dulcy wore the look of serene contentment which told him that she would do whatever she thought best.

Dulcy Warned

As Forbes leaned over to light a cigar, Gordon shook his head at her, and repeated his warning, but in his heart he knew that she would lose not a moment. She looked so angelic, standing there, that he felt guilty for even thinking that she might do anything wrong. Dulcy just couldn't; she was the loveliest, best-hearted girl in the world, he reminded himself. But she certainly could cause a lot of trouble with her good intentions.

"I have the most wonderful day planned for you tomorrow," she told Mr. Forbes, enthusiastically. "You're just going to play and play and play."

He tried to protest, but she didn't listen.

"You're going to ride and play golf and—"

"My back," he began feebly. But she wasn't interested in his back. He was just like Gordon, working so hard and never getting diversion in healthy outdoor sports that would rest him and be good for him.

"You remind me so much of Gordon." If he but knew it, that was the highest tribute Dulcy could pay anyone, and she thought she was stretching the truth just a little to tell this crosspatch that he was in the least like her beloved. But Dulcy was willing to stake all on the master stroke she had prepared for him.

"You know, Gordon works so hard, the poor boy. I don't suppose he had told you, but he's got a lot of things on hand."

Forbes took a renewed interest in the conversation from that moment.

"You might as well know—it isn't only the pearl business he works on," she continued mysteriously. "He had lots and lots of other interests, too."

Demands Explanation

If Dulcy, with expert aim, had thrown a sizzling bomb right into his lap, the effect wouldn't have been more startling.

"It's really asking too much of him to make him give up all these other things to come into the jewelry merger with you," she prattled on, innocent of the sensation she was causing. "If he just got sixteen and two-thirds per cent as his share he couldn't afford to give up all his time to it. Oh no, he'd have to look after his other affairs, too, and you'd be the loser."

"I didn't know he had any other interests," Forbes sputtered indignantly, determined to have this out with the young woman here and now. The infernal cheek of that young man, leading him on to think that he would devote his entire energies to the new combination if Forbes would only take his company over. Obviously Miss Parker knew what she was talking about, she had even mentioned the exact figure which had been discussed only in confidence. Well, he'd caught that chap in his double-dealing now!

He turned to Dulcy to demand a full explanation, but, having airily disposed of Gordon's business troubles, she was now intent on other plans. Catching a glimpse of Vincent Leach in the window, she called breathlessly, "Oh, Gordon, Gordon, Bring Angela here this minute. There's someone waiting for her!"

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

When Mind and Body Fail to Co-ordinate

ACCIDENTS caused by automobiles are increasing rapidly. You have only to enter a hospital to find the large number who are there recovering from some automobile casualty. Every newspaper has the sad stories of accidents, accidents from many causes.

DR. COPELAND

One authority tells us that there are twice as many children of school age killed in accidents as die of any one disease. This is really appalling! What can be done to lessen this harvest of life and limb?

We see "Safety-First" signs everywhere. They are put up by the health authorities in every great city. They are seen in street cars, trains and in buses. The Red Cross and the state do much in this line. Attempts are made to educate the people so that they will exercise every care to avoid accidents.

St. Louis has introduced into its schools a system of safety education for boys and girls. The result has been that 75 per cent of the usual number of accidents to children have been prevented. Every city should follow this noble example.

According to the National Safety Council, there are 34 non-fatal accidents to every fatal one. We are glad it isn't worse, but this means that out of 34 accidents many victims will be crippled in some way or other, and some of them permanently.

In stormy, slippery weather, there are numerous accidents. People go, with lowered heads, maybe under umbrellas. They dash around in front of street cars and automobiles, without stopping to make sure of safe passage.

On the street, in the store, in the factory, or right at home, any one of us is liable to have an accident. When one is overtired or absent-minded, it is very easy to make a misstep or to do the thing which wouldn't be done if the mind were alert to every move.

Some persons seem to stumble more easily than others. How can we develop our power of co-ordination? It is well that children when they are young have gymnastic exercises, some form of games or dancing, some form of exercise that will train body and brain to work together. What we call "poise" of the body is developed in this manner.

These things influence the good health of the child. Perhaps fewer accidents would happen if all could be taught poise, alertness and the importance of what we call "safety first."

Horoscopes

Sunday, February 9

SUNDAY'S horoscope holds promise for those in employment and also fosters all affiliations of a domestic, affectional and cultural complexion. Spiritual matters and secret orders also prosper.

Those whose birthday it is may look for promotion, honors or preferments during the year, with purely personal interests thriving. They may make excellent connection with large corporations.

A child born on this day should be well equipped for success, position and happiness.

Monday, February 10

MONDAY'S astrological forecast is not a favorable one. There are auguries of obstacles, frustration, disagreeable and abrupt change, and hints of sinister or singular intrigues. It is a day for circumspect and wise actions.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year calling for wisdom, discretion and fine acumen in order to overcome obstacles and trials. Holding the ground rather than new ventures is recommended.

A child born on this day should be given early schooling and training to fit it to surmount obstacles in life.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

On the Right or on the Left

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you please settle an argument between myself and nephew? I think the salad should be served at the left of the plate, and he thinks it should be placed at the right. Which is correct?

MRS. M. J. M.

BOTH are correct. That is the salad may be placed at whichever side is more convenient. Usually, as a matter of fact, it is placed at the left. Why, I don't know, since this is usually not the more convenient side from which to eat it. If there is only one glass on the right (and in these days there usually is only one!) it is, I think, more convenient to have the salad placed at the right of the plate.

Those That Do Not Dance

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

When a girl invites a boy to a party and the girl does not dance much, and neither does he, how should he entertain her during the party? E. M.

THEY would chat with each other and with other friends present. And in the meantime they would resolve to take lessons in dancing and become adept in that glorious art, before they attend another dance. At a dance one is supposed to dance! And one of the dullest things to do in the social world is not to dance when you go to a dance. Dance rhythm is such a magnificent part of life that we should enjoy it as long as we can, and as often as we can.

Theater Reviews and Notes About Coming Attractions

SIDE WALKS of PITTSBURGH

by WILLIAM PFARR

WALTER WINCHELL is scheduled to speak at a Pittsburgh banquet in April . . . A. Miller, the North Side gentleman who exterminates bugs, once played the London music halls with Charlie Chaplin . . . The winner of that bike race in Motor Square Garden had never ridden one before the race . . . Add vital statistics:

There is one policeman for every 600 persons in the city . . . Pittsburgh's traffic in 1929 was 10.6 per cent greater than in 1928 . . .

He went to the North Pole with Rear Admiral Byrd, but Lieut. J. Duff Reed, a Pittsburgher, still holds that cleaning the snow off the sidewalk is the world's worst job . . .

That Third avenue barber college which accepted street-car chips for 10-cent shaves has called it all off because too many gents with eight-day beards dropped in . . . The reason: Panhandlers can panhandle the chips easier . . . There's nothing in the books against it, but women are never called to serve on the federal juries in Pittsburgh . . .

Lewis B. Ely, who wrote the play, "Sporting Blood," went to New Castle for a glimpse of the trigger woman, but couldn't get past the sheriff . . . When a soda jerker shouts "Thirty-seven," he really means "The dame who ordered one frosted chocolate is a terrible crab" . . . One of the county's new watchmen is a watchman because he lost everything in the market . . . There is nothing to the gossip that Roy Archibald, the oil distributor who found it expensive business bossing the Mid-Atlantic League in its first year, will return to baseball . . . Duquesne University's coat of arms was designed by one of its English instructors, the Rev. John F. Malley . . .

drawing, "Snow on Pittsburgh," by Eugene P. Metour . . . Two stars alongside your name on a telegram means bad news . . .

Will Rogers Says:

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.

REMEMBER in one dispatch I told you I had a red-hot tip that Mr. MacDonald might propose something pretty sweeping. He did it. He proposed to sink all our battleships and all France's submarines. Of course, he would sink theirs, too.

They don't need the big ships. They don't have to go as far for their wars as we do. We have no naval bases. We have to go away off and fight all afternoon and then have enough sandwiches and gasoline to get back to Newport News. While England's naval bases are as monotonous as speakeasies, he didn't offer to abolish light, fast cruisers and France's submarines are her ace in the hole. But our delegation know all these things and we are still in safe hands.

Yours,

WILL.

FRITZ LEIBER PLAYS HAMLET TO LARGEST AUDIENCE OF ENTIRE WEEK

By GEORGE SEIBEL

WRITING in his Diary in 1663, Pepys made the note: "To the Duke's house, and there saw Hamlet done, giving us fresh reason never to think enough of Betterton." Betterton was the second great Hamlet, Richard Burbage having been the first, and since their day this role has been the touchstone of great actors.

George Seibel

Garrick, Kemble, the two Keans, the two Booths, Fechter, Davenport, Barrett, Irving, Kainz, Rossi, Sothern, Mantell, Hampden, Barrymore—and now Fritz Leiber wears the "inky cloak" that typifies the melancholy Prince.

The performance at the Alvin Theater last night was not Leiber's first appearance here as Hamlet. But he has deepened his conception of the role and polished its execution.

John Kemble used to say that he studied Hamlet seven years before he acted it, and after playing it 30 years something new always struck him when he took up the role again. Leiber seems to regard it in the same way. New business here, a significant pause there, some illuminative detail elsewhere—all tending to clarify and heighten the thought and the poetry.

He is not afraid to take liberties with the tradition. And there is no reason why the tradition should become canon law. Fechter played Hamlet with a blond wig, and Garrick threw out the Grave-Diggers. So why should present-day actors be afraid to make innovations?

Leiber certainly is not afraid. None of his new business is revolutionary—all of it is interesting and significant.

Largest Audience Yet

The popularity of the play was shown by the largest attendance of the week. It was an intelligent audience, besides, which appreciated the finer points of the performance. The soliloquy, the address to the players, the philosophizings beside the grave of Ophelia, the duel and death were followed breathlessly—the applause was ungrudging.

Marie Carroll again achieved distinction in the role of Ophelia—this actress reads her lines without any apparent strain and has an air of girlish simplicity that charms without cloying. Her mad scene had the audience in tears. She is the sweetest Ophelia since Julia Marlowe was young.

Hart Jenks lent spectral dignity to the Ghost—the part Shakespeare himself used to play. Robert Strauss put just as much unctuous humor into the First Grave-Digger—a part Joe Jefferson once played in an all-star cast. And Lawrence H. Cecil was a noble Laertes full of fire.

John Burke as Horatio, Louis Leon Hall as Claudius, Virginia Bronson as Queen Gertrude, made the most of their opportunities. As for Phillip Quin's Polonius, it kept away from clowning and was garrulous without being foolish.

So This Is Denmark

Like the other productions of the week, this one is quite new, and the scenery, while simple and suggestive, is far more convincing than the flats of the old style or the soap-box stages of the impressionists. And the costumes would have convinced anybody but a fanatical antiquary that this was Denmark.

After all, the play's the thing, and the players make the play. This was a remarkably fine Hamlet—many critics have called Leiber the finest of this generation.

William Hazlitt said "Hamlet is probably of all others the most difficult to personate on the stage." George Henry Lewes said "Hamlet is the easiest of all Shakespeare's great parts for an actor of moderate ability." Here is quite a difference of opinion—but there are many actors of moderate ability and few great Hamlets.

Leiber is a great Hamlet. This is the tragedy of the thinker—and he has the pensive air, the cadenced voice, of one who thinks. The gentleman from Stratford would have approved and applauded last night.

MUSICAL PLAY AND WAR COMING

"Journey's End," war drama, opens an engagement at the Alvin Monday night. It was first produced in London and was an overnight success there.

Seats are on sale at the box office of the Nixon for the engagement of the musical comedy, "The Vagabond King," based on McCarthy's romance, "If I Were King," which will open Monday evening.

"The Love Parade" comes to the Aldine Monday. Maurice Chevalier is starred in the production. Ernst Lubitsch was the director. Others in the cast are Jeanette MacDonald, Lupino Lane, Lillian Roth, Ben Turpin, and others.

The final performances of "Jonesy," will be given today in the Pitt by the George Sharp Players. The attraction next week will be "The Ghost Train."

Camera Question Box

The Sun-Telegraph's "Camera Question Box" each day will ask a question of public interest to Pittsburghers and will photograph those interviewed.

Today's question: Criminologists assert that most of the bandits who have been terrorizing American cities are dope addicts. In view of this situation do you think Congressman Stephen G. Porter is justified in advocating more stringent laws to stamp out the narcotic evil?

EDWARD L. HARKINS, city detective, narcotic squad: "After 22 years' experience in the narcotic squad, I believe that drugs are one of the greatest evils to society. I also believe that 80 per cent of the crimes are committed by men temporarily under the influence of dope. This dope peps them up to such an extent that they will stop at nothing. Yes, Congressman Porter is justified in promoting such legislation."

Edward Harkins

ANNA G. RIDGE, police matron, Morals Court: "Even though I do not come in contact with as many dope cases as formerly, the situation remains much the same. There can be no doubt that dope loosens the morals of its users, and that a person under its influence is not responsible for his actions. To acquire narcotics the addict will go to almost any length. Congressman Porter is doing a great work and deserves the support of everybody."

Anna G. Ridge

PAULINE D. RUBEN, Morals Court attache: "Yes, I'm in favor of Congressman Porter's attitude. I also believe that the user of dope should be treated for his disease. Nothing can be accomplished by throwing the addict into a cell to suffer from the ravages of narcotics. The addict can be compared to an insane person. The medical science can do much to aid matters, while a jail sentence can do little or nothing."

Pauline D. Ruben

HOWARD N. FORNER, city detective, narcotic squad: "I can think of no one who is more conversant with the narcotic problem than Steve Porter. He has already done much to relieve the situation, and, in my opinion, will do more. As a city detective I have been placed in a position to see the evils of dope traffic. The 'hop head' is known to be one of the most difficult men to apprehend after he has committed a crime. My support goes to Congressman Porter."

Howard N. Forner

ROY W. SCHAFER, police officer: "Do I think Congressman Porter is justified? Certainly, yes. On my day as a policeman I have encountered a few dope of crime. They addicts engaged in the business were nervous fellows and easily frightened when not loaded with dope. When they were 'soaked' nothing was too dangerous for them. The addict is the most cunning of all criminals. Get rid of dope and you'll get rid of a lot of shooting scrapes and crime in general."

Roy W. Schafer

CHARLES E. DEKOCK, passenger agent: "I do not know Congressman Porter, but he has my support when he advocates more stringent laws to do away with the narcotic evil. I read almost every day about crimes being committed by criminals who take dope. As every one knows, dope is not a thing to fool with. I imagine that the dope fiend would do anything to get sufficient money with which to satisfy his hunger for narcotics."

W. BOYD JOINS ARMY TO GET THE GIRL

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

The movie cameras and the sound machine take a fling at present-day army life in "His First Command," the Pathe talkie which opened yesterday in the Stanley. It is all about a hero who joins the army to get the girl. Which makes him a rather exceptional fellow, as most of the other soldiers in this flicker "joined up" to get away from the women.

William Boyd, the lad who once "rowed" a boat on the Volga River, does the hero gesture. And, of course, he gets the girl at the clinchy finale. But before that he meets with enlightenment. He learns you can't get chummy with colonels, though your father is a millionaire. He discovers also that you can't go around "socking" lieutenants and get away with it. Yet, he never regrets he joined the army just to win the colonel's daughter.

A melodramatic rescue comes as the climax of the film, with our hero riding like mad to the rescue of a child who lies unconscious in the path of a "herd" of steeplechasing cavalrymen.

The picture is easy-to-take entertainment. Laughs are its chief ingredient. However, it won't stand a very critical diagnosis. Boyd puts strength and becoming comedy flourishes into his portrayal. But Dorothy Sebastian, as heroine, gets no bouquets from us. Scenes were made at Fort Riley and thus an authentic army atmosphere is created. And there is one sequence done in color—depicting a cavalry regiment on parade—that attains the most natural color effects we've ever seen on the screen.

"Bombay" is the title of the stage show. Johnny Perkins, very rotund and funny enough, dominates this part of the bill. He wisecracks and he sings a couple songs. Dick Powell, with his face crowded with smiles as usual, is present long enough to offer two song numbers. One of them is "Chickie, I Can't Forget You're Still My Sweetheart," which is dedicated to the heroine of the Sun-Telegraph's serial story, "Chickie." Other features include three keen tumblers and some dancing girls.

David Broddy takes his orchestra through some "No, No Nanette" tunes as his overture and Bernie Armstrong bobs up with another organlogue.

The Nixon will present "Otis Skinner in Papa Juan" beginning today.

Victor Graff will present "Garden of Roses" on the Harris stage, beginning today. The all-talking, first-run screen feature will be "Harmony at Home," featuring Marguerite Churchill and William Collier, Sr.

NEW PICTURE TODAY

There are new songs, as well as old ones, in "No, No, Nanette," the all-talking, technicolor film which opens in the Warner today. Bernice Claire, Alexander Gray, Lucien Littlefield, Lilyan Tashman, Bert Roach and Louise Fazenda are in the cast.

Mae Murray is supported by Jason Robards and George Barraud in her first talking picture, "Peacock Alley," which opens its second week in the Olympic today.

"Hit the Deck," starring Jack Oakie, begins a second week in the Sheridan Square today.

Eddie Cantor Rises to Say:

CHICAGO, Feb. 8.

Just as I predicted, the American delegation in London adopts virtually the entire British program for naval limitation. Great Britain remains the "mistress of the seas," shows you what these tea parties will do. We should not have sent our delegates over there in the first place. England sunk our navy with tea. Our representatives got lemon with their tea and Great Britain took all the "cream." It should teach us a lesson. We Americans should stay at home. Why, any baseball fan will tell you the "Yankees" can always do better on their home grounds.

The daughter of Francis X. Bushman is engaged to marry a book-seller in Hollywood: well, that's one way to get the books that are censored.

I don't know why the Law Enforcement Commission recommended "no jury trials for liquor cases" unless it is because now-a-days it would be tough to find twelve men who are not in the liquor racket.

Walter Winchell On Broadway

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.

Complaint

I'd like to be a thrifty gent,
And save my dough at four per cent.

In later years I'd live in ease
Nor want for any luxuries.

But waste is my besetting sin;
I take my earnings to an inn,

Invest them there in musty ale—
And put my foot upon a rail.

No bank that I have seen so far
Is half as tempting as a bar.

The tellers are an uppish bunch,
And, strange to say, there's no free lunch.

Depositors are sour as brine
And no one sings "Sweet Adeline."

No picture there of Fitz or Tunney—
They'll have to change to get my money!

—Not Peggy Joyce.

SUCH PROFANITY!

WHAT with matters being as tedious as they are on Broadway, Robert Littell, the World's dremeh critic, recently begged for a feud among the reviewers. Littell urged anyone to start a controversy—a controversy of any sort, so long as it was something to get excited about. He thought he said, that perhaps it might make the theater seem alive.

Well, Heywood Broun, who quit drama-defending a long while ago, but who frequently goes to the plays, stiffly defended Donald Ogden Stewart, whose "Rebound" was not received affectionately the other premiere night. Mr. Broun considered "Rebound" "the best light comedy written by anybody hereabouts in 10 or 20 years," and so asserted in his department, winding up his essay in this manner: "To hell with the critics!"

My dear Mr. Broun! Please remember there are stage hands present!

PRICELESS

ASHTON STEVENS, one of the few Chicagoans still alive, reports the one about the movie actor who was talking with Frank Case.

"But I fear," concluded the windy ham, "that I am talking a great deal about myself. Let's talk about you. How did YOU enjoy my last picture?"

THINGS I'VE JUST LEARNED

That the famous square bar which graced Considine's at Broadway and 42nd Street is now in a speakeasy on the Saw Mill River Road in Westchester County where Chinese bartenders and waiters dispense a brew that is so excellent at two bits a throw that four uniformed private policemen are necessary on Saturdays and Sundays to assist the customers in parking their automobiles.

BY WAY OF REPORT

IF YOU get the head of almost any large corporation such as an automobile manufacturer, a radio manufacturer, a motion picture manufacturer or even an electric refrigerator manufacturer off in a corner and gain his confidence, he will tell you that it is the general opinion in industry that sales in almost any line have about reached their peak and there is no known form of advertising or inducement of installment payment which can lift the volume of business much above its present levels.

He will also tell you that the gradual assumption of banking control of industry by the Morgans and others means that success in the next few years will be found principally in the perfecting of labor-saving machinery and the elimination of unnecessary employes to the last stenographer.

The average business, it is claimed, can be made to function more efficiently than at present on about 10 per cent less than its present number of employes. He will also inform you that industry in general welcomes a condition of unemployment at all times which is large enough to add fear to the driving power of the plant and to create a condition in which employes break their necks to hold their jobs because of the constant knowledge that plenty of others are waiting for them.

ANYTHING FOR A LAUGH

All is fair in love and Broadway, as the saying goes, when a pair of Broadway columnists get together. The Big Idea is not to land the first caustic crack but to "top" the other's flippancy. At an opening the other evening, for instance, one of the ambitious ankled up to one of his "superiors" and said: "Well, how's the big shot today?"

"I'm very clever—and you?" was the retort terrible. "Incidentally, you're wearing your hat too far down on your skull."

"Well," was the alibi, "you see, I haven't got a big head, ahem!"

"Of course you haven't," snapped the other, "but what have you ever done, to have one?"

And then the intermission buzzer buzzed.

HO, HUM

The high cost of hop bothers many of the lads who "kick the gong around" these cold winter nights, so the news that a chemist has worked out a formula for synthetic opium is received with leather-lunged cheers by the ever-growing mob that leans up against the old bamboo.

The artificial lullaby is said to contain plenty of wallop and to make a satisfactory substitute for the real poppy product and at one-tenth the cost per can. At present it is being judiciously distributed to a few of the veterans who can dream a toothpick into the Woolworth Building.

OF ALL THINGS!

A few months ago Broadway window-shoppers gasped when a Forty-eighth street haberdasher decorated his windows with "Maurice Chevalier" shirts," which were either all black or all red—with collar attached. Most of us merely sniffed or muttered something and passed on, certain the freak material never would enjoy popularity, except perhaps, with the Harlem Dandies.

Now the Broadway shop windows display another startling innovation. It is a frisky suit of underwear for men consisting of an all orange colored undershirt and all-purple drawers.

HORTON TAKES TO AIR IN ENRIGHT

By HOWARD L. BROWNING, JR.

For fat men wishing to reduce, for young men envious of maturity and gray hairs, for women generally, and, in fact, for just about everyone, "The Aviator," new talkie in the Enright, can be honestly recommended.

It's comedy folks — comedy without the custard pies, comedy with airplanes, stunt flying and Edward Everett Horton. From the play by James Montgomery, a strong innoculation of action has made it into one of the better movies.

Poor Edward Everett, as Robert Street, author of some books but not of "The Aviator," to which book he has signed his name, has liver trouble. And all the pills assiduously given him by his faithful valet, Johnny Arthur, as Hobart, don't make it any less white.

This book, by the way, is a best seller, and everyone thinks the fellow who appears on the cover as the author must be a great flier, including the little girl—played by Patsy Ruth Miller—whom the hero is much interested in. So there is nothing for him to do but to fly. His admirers watch him and think it's stunt flying. It isn't. It's involuntary suicide—or nearly so.

"Chickie," theme song for the Sun-Telegraph's new serial, is played by one of the co-authors, Jay Mills. Another master of ceremonies, Dick Powell, did the words.

The stage show, Topsy-Turvy, as a whole, is yes and no. Mostly no.

ALLEGHENY COUNTY
'Public Improvements Promote Progress'
Convinced that public improvements exert an important influence upon the progress of any community, the Board of County Commissioners of Allegheny County, on January 1, 1924, initiated a program of major public works, many of which are already effectively serving the citizens, while others of vital importance are being rapidly brought to completion.
During the year 1930 thirty-six miles of roads and boulevards, totaling in cost approximately $6,000,000, were completed or placed under construction. This represents the largest yearly road construction program undertaken by the County Commissioners. The list includes the Ohio River Boulevard, Saw Mill Run Boulevard, Moss Side Boulevard, and 21 other road projects widely distributed throughout the County. The most up-to-date road construction practices were followed in this work.

ACCOUNTANTS TRAINED BY SCHOOL

Pittsburgh Organization Gives Practical Training To Day Students Here

Not so many years ago a thorough technical education in accounting enabled the student, without much difficulty, to obtain a position in the business world, along the lines he had been studying. Today the situation has changed so that a technical education plus a certain experience in accounting is almost necessary to the procuring of such a position. Recent surveys in several large cities permit this deduction.

Higher institutions of learning, in recognizing this, have been working on the problem of teaching theory and practice and giving experience at the same time.

In an effort to solve this the Pittsburgh School of Accountancy has evolved a plan for day school students which is effective.

When a day school student has satisfactorily completed a major portion of the first semester of his freshman year he has the option of being assigned to a business organization for practical experience for five afternoons each week. Reporting at a designated hour he works under the direct supervision of an office executive without compensation but under the regular rules and regulations of the office.

CONDUCT STUDIED

During this trial period his conduct, appearance, attendance, initiative, interest and efficiency are carefully reviewed by the school officials in conference with the executive. Every possible effort is made to encourage the student along specific lines indicated by the report received from the executive.

At the end of one month the usual length of the assignment a second assignment is made to an organization of a different type under entirely different conditions. This procedure is repeated each month during the remainder of the school year. In this manner the student receives the benefit of constructive criticism from a number of experienced executives, forms many valuable acquaintances in business offices and gains considerable knowledge pertaining to office procedure and the best business practice.

Frequently students are asked to join these organizations at the close of the school year. In such cases the student transfers to the evening school and is able to continue his education without interruption.

RESULTS GOOD

The results of this method of obtaining experience have more than justified the pains taken with individual students. Nearly every student who has taken these "practical work assignments" has made good in his first position.

The Pittsburgh School of Accountancy announces that on February 17 a new day school class will have its opening. The class will be taught by Andrew St. Blass, C. P. A., senior partner of the firm of Blass, Wood & Company, accountants and auditors; Ernest McLuckie, C. P. A., director of studies at Pittsburgh School of Accountancy and J. A. McCann, B.A., L.L.B., special assistant United States district attorney.

PRICE OF WIRE GLASS UP

The American Glass Review in its issue of February 8 will say: Some strengthening of the market for wire glass products was the outstanding feature of an otherwise quiet and rather listless week in the flat glass industry. Effective February 5, the manufacturers advanced quotations on wire glass 1 cent a foot. The demand for this commodity, as well as for rough rolled glass products, is reported in fairly good seasonal volume with the market now in a much better condition than throughout the major portion of last year. As many new building projects in which these types of glass are used are now under way, a steady increase in the demand would seem assured.

While the demand for plate glass continues along rather quiet lines, compared with this period of a year ago, all indications are for an early improvement, as production in the automobile industry gets under way. Conservative estimates place present output of the plate glass factories at around 70 per cent of capacity.

The company has been formed to manufacture bi-metallic products through the union of ferrous and non-ferrous metals, and plans to occupy the plant formerly used by the Charlerol Steel and Foundries Company, Charlerol, Pa.

Officers of the company are A. E. Strasser, president; Norman Allderdice, vice president; James C. Curtin, vice president; and Herbert H. Hallsted, secretary and treasurer.

BUSINESS FOR WEEK OFF

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Check payments continued to decline during the week ended February 1 and were also smaller than for the corresponding week of last year, according to the weekly statement of the Department of Commerce. Receipts of wheat and of cattle were also smaller than during the previous week, wheat receipts also being smaller than a year ago. Receipts of cotton and of hogs, on the other hand, were larger than during the previous week, hog receipts being substantially greater than for the corresponding week of 1929. The movement of goods through primary channels, as reflected by freight carloadings during the latest reported period, continued below the corresponding week of last year.

The general index of wholesale prices declined from the previous week and was also below the corresponding week of last year. Prices for cotton and iron and steel also declined both from the previous week and the corresponding week of 1929, while wheat and copper prices were unchanged from the week before. Interest rates on call money continued unchanged, while those on time money were slightly higher than during recent weeks, both rates being much lower than a year ago. Business failures were fewer than during the previous week and only slightly more numerous than a year ago. Stock prices strengthened substantially from last week's level, but were still well below the average of the corresponding week of 1929. Bond prices were unchanged from the previous week and were below the level of a year ago.

Postal Receipts in 50 Cities Increase

WASHINGTON, Feb. 8.—Postal receipts at 50 selected cities throughout the country for January, showed an increase of $583,506.86 or 1.85 per cent over those for January, 1929, according to figures made public at the Post Office Department.

The total receipts for January were $32,198,916.55, as against $31,615,409.69 for the corresponding month of 1929.

Leading cities with their percentages of increase were: Des Moines, Ia., 19.93 per cent; Houston, Tex., 13.97 per cent, and Dayton, O., 12.07 per cent. New York city reported an increase of 2.09 per cent.

Exports of Meat Showed Gain In 1929

Exports of meats and fats from the United States showed an appreciable increase during the last calendar year, according to a statement issued today by the Institute of American Meat Packers, based on figures issued by the United States Department of Commerce.

Combined exports of meats and fats amounted to 1,392,000,000 pounds, valued at $196,470,000, an increase of approximately 9.3 per cent in quantity and 9 per cent in value, as compared with the preceding year. Exports of meats alone amounted to 445,500,000 pounds, valued at $78,750,000, an increase of 12 per cent in quantity and 16 per cent in value over 1928.

SCHOOL STARTS NEW COURSE

In response to a popular demand Pittsburgh Academy again offers a course in advertising typography layout and design to be conducted by Edwin H. Stuart, president of Edwin H. Stuart, Inc., typographic service.

This course was conducted twice last year with great success. Now in addition, a new course in advanced typography is to be offered under the direction of George Kinnard, superintendent of Edwin H. Stuart, Inc. These courses, together with a course in advertising, afford an opportunity for thorough instruction and training in the advertising field. Classes begin Thursday, February 13. New material has been added to the course in layout and design, and the time lengthened to insure students a comprehensive knowledge of typography.

WIDELY KNOWN

Mr. Stuart is a nationally known typographic designer, and is recognized as one of the foremost typographers in this section of the country. Many of Pittsburgh's advertising executives have retained him to assist in their design and layout work.

The author of several volumes and booklets dealing with advertising and typography, among them "Utilizing the By-Products of a Printing Business" and "Stuart's Type Book," Mr. Stuart is well qualified to conduct such a course. In addition to his manifold other duties, he is the guiding genius behind Typographic, a newsy, ingenious monthly on advertising and typography.

RECENT INVENTION

Typography itself is of recent invention and development. Since its advent newspaper and magazine advertising have been enhanced to the point where type, artistically designed and effectively arranged, is capable of arousing in readers a whole range of emotions and psychological reactions. The combination of effective setup and honest copy are at the basis of the great progress advertising has made in recent years.

WINDOW GLASS UNSTEADY

The window glass industry continues to be discouraging, according to the National Glass Budget.

In spite of a heavy curtailment in production it still is much in excess of demand. So pronounced is this that the market conditions are reported in considerable chaos.

With a large prospective building program estimated for the year, and the recognized dull months for this type of glass almost past, there should be a much better spirit manifest.

It is thought that production, now running not far from 500,000 boxes a month, is not excessive, and that general conditions and a normal demand should give the trade a brighter outlook. Instead of this there is anything but a bright future at the present time.

Prices quoted are so far below the established ones that they are ridiculous, and only on the grounds of extreme need can they be justified.

'Independent' Business Men Share Profits

By B. C. FORBES

THE crushing of "independent" business men by the rapid growth of gigantic corporations and chains is widely lamented, but General Motors shows how men can join a corporation and still feel they are working for themselves.

After General Motors earns 7 per cent on its capital, the senior executives are allowed 5 per cent of net earnings, and 5 per cent in stock is distributed among others holding responsible positions. To take advantage of this plan, the senior executives have to subscribe for stock in a managers' securities company. The original one, organized in 1923, has made no fewer than 80 executives millionaires.

A new General Motors Management Corporation is now being formed to take the place of the one expiring this year. It is interesting to learn that $40 is being charged by General Motors for the 1,375,000 shares of its stock it is selling to the new management corporation. It is also interesting to note that General Motors has accumulated this block at distinctly less than $40 a share.

Each General Motors' man holding an important position feels that he is working for his own profit. Salaries paid by the corporation, so far as I know, are not phenomenally large. To become rich, the managers must make money for the corporation and its stockholders.

If corporations are to dominate the industrial and business life of the United States—as looks extremely probable—is there any better way than profit-sharing to create within responsible employes the feeling that they are not working wholly for an employer, but for themselves? As I see it, profit-sharing by large organizations must inevitably spread. The brainiest men now prefer profit-sharing to straight salaries. And the demand now is, not for second-raters, but for absolutely top notch executives.

"THE Northwest is more cheerful, and apparently doing better, than the East," President A. W. Leonard, of the Puget Sound Power Company, observed to me in New York yesterday. "Our whole territory is growing. Seattle goes steadily ahead."

Asked about the scarcity of water we heard so much about not so long ago, when a battleship was called into service to supply electric light and power, Leonard said:

"Our reservoirs are now about half filled. This is not as much as we could wish, but it now looks as if the supply will turn out reasonably well. Our own company is doing excellently."

Puget Sound is a Stone & Webster property. Like all other Stone & Webster higher-ups, Mr. Leonard feels extremely optimistic about the attractiveness of Stone & Webster shares, which last year were made available to the public at par. After being carried above $200 a share in the general stock boom, they suffered with the rest of the list, but this week took a sharp spurt to the neighborhood of par.

PAUL S. CHAPMAN, who took over from the government the United States Lines, which include the Leviathan, related this incident to me the other day to illustrate the advantages of having lots of stockholders.

A native of Sweden, who had done well in Minneapolis, sought 10 shares of the shipping stock. A relative in Sweden wanted financial assistance to come to America. The stockholder went to the United States Lines' office and made arrangements for his relative's passage. But he received a letter explaining that it would be more convenient to travel by a different route. The stockholders indignantly cabled, "Come by United States Line or don't come."

The financial statement recently issued by President Chapman shows that the line has already been put on a money-making basis. With proper cooperation from the government, and especially the Postoffice Department, Mr. Chapman is confident that this country can now build up a creditable mercantile marine.

ROUND TABLE OF BUSINESS

JANUARY STEEL PRODUCTION LARGE

Present Heavy Output Not In Accord With Building Activity; Mills Busy

By B. E. V. LUTY.

January production of Bessemer and open-hearth steel ingots was 3,786,319 tons, representing an average daily rate of 140,234 tons, 21 per cent over the December rate and 28 per cent under the peak rate of last May. Relative to circumstances as generally appraised last month's production was remarkably large. There was a close approach to the rate at the end of October, when the collapse of the stock market had not had time to exert an influence.

Production in the past week has been somewhat higher than the January average. While there was some further and progressive increase during the month, the official report shows January production at 71.51 per cent of capacity, but that is capacity as ascertained for December 31, 1928. The annual capacity ascertainment is now being made and will probably show in the neighborhood of 4 per cent increase for December 31, 1929. On that basis January production was at about 69 per cent and present production may be estimated at about half way between 70 and 75 per cent. When the new finding is completed some three months hence, percentages for the early months of the year will be officially revised accordingly.

CONTINUED INCREASE

Such heavy steel production is not in close harmony with industrial and building activity at the present time. No careful observer is likely to dispute this statement. A test may easily be applied by considering the improvement in industrial and building activity that is expected to occur. The common view is that activity will increase not only in the next few months but in the second half of the year, making the second half better than the first half, which is not usually the case with steel. An increase of one-third over the present rate of steel production would make a new record high rate, and that has hardly been expected for this year.

Steel consumption is the final determinant. There is no overproduction by mills, in excess of actual orders, except that a few mills may be replenishing stocks of ingots. There is no anticipating of requirements, or laying in stocks, on the part of consumers, as frequently was the case in the old days when business was improving. Buyers are still very conservative.

NEWS FAVORABLE

The best explanation of the anomaly seems to be that in the late weeks of the old year there was such drastic curtailment of inventories all down the line, including manufactured wares of various sorts, that replenishment was necessary, making a temporary extra demand. From this viewpoint, steel consumption should continue to increase week by week, but steel production would not increase correspondingly over the recent rate.

The business news of the week on the steel trade has been very favorable. By far the main item is decidedly greater steadiness in prices, while as to special buying [illegible] were large fabricated structural steel orders and the largest [illegible] batch of X freight car orders for a long time.

FABRICATED LETTINGS

In each of the last two weeks about 53,000 tons of fabricated structural steel has been reported as let, against a total of only 60,000 tons during the three weeks preceding. The average for the five weeks is about three-fourths the general average of last year, which was record high by a substantial margin. It is true that the largest order book of the fabricating shops fell in last September, but the loss since then has been small and the present order book is equivalent to about five months of work at the high rate of the last few months.

The agricultural implement industry is operating at not far from capacity and at a better rate than in the late months of last year. Unfavorable grain markets have evidently exerted no adverse influence. Rail shipments are at close to their maximum rate in the last few years. Structural fabricating shops are running at their high rate of last year. Freight car shops are running substantially as well as formerly. Some of the cars ordered last October are only now getting into production, and there is much car repair work.

FIRMER PRICES

The foregoing are the active spots in connection with steel. On the whole they are doing fully as well as last year if not better, but they scarcely represent one-third of total normal steel consuming lines.

The behavior of finished steel prices is greatly improved, although still considerably short of perfect. In the last fortnight there have been no outright declines in any important finished steel product, while previously there had been various declines.

President

JOSEPH H. REIMAN

OFFICERS ARE RE-ELECTED

At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Knights Life Insurance Company, held last Wednesday in the assembly room of the Jenkins Arcade Building, which adjoins the home and Pittsburgh district offices, the following were chosen directors for the ensuing year: Joseph H. Reiman, Pittsburgh; P. Joseph Hess, Pittsburgh; Louis Seethaler, West View; Dr. J. C. Hierholzer, Pittsburgh; John A. Sossong, Crafton; Christian Steinmetz, Wheeling; John N. Horo, Johnstown; William P. Brueckmann, Allentown; V. A. Oswald, Altoona; Joseph G. Renvers, Crafton, and George J. Bleichner, Pittsburgh.

Subsequently the following were elected officers: Joseph H. Reiman, president; P. Joseph Hess, vice president and secretary; Louis Seethaler, treasurer; John A. Sossong, assistant treasurer; Joseph G. Renvers, assistant secretary; Dr. J. C. Hierholzer, medical director; Leonard M. Boehm, Esq., solicitor; William C. Ley, superintendent of agencies, and Frank M. Speakman, consulting actuary.

At the first meeting of the new board a dividend of $1 a share was declared to stockholders of record February 1, 1930.

Among the high lights in the annual report submitted by P. Joseph Hess, secretary, and Joseph H. Reiman, president, were these impressive figures proving the progressive development and outstanding record made during 1929 by the Knights Life:

Net increase in assets	$ 506,000.00
Insurance in force	42,224,399.00
Municipal bonds	2,864,600.00
Legal reserve	3,287,618.59
Premium income, two years	2,441,596.84
Policies in force	122,513

Having outgrown its present quarters in the Jenkins Arcade, an advisory committee from the stockholders was appointed, consisting of Joseph Hungerman, John Hinnebusch, P. S. Huckestein, Frank Stifter and Joseph O. Vogel, to work out plans for the acquirement of a home office building in conjunction with the board of directors of the company.

Exchange Buffet Co. Earns $2.20 Share

NEW YORK, Feb. 8—Earnings of $2.20 a share on 250,000 shares of common stock outstanding are estimated for Exchange Buffet Corporation for fiscal year to end April 30. This would compare with actual earnings of $2.03 a share reported by company for previous fiscal year. Total net income for current year should approximate $550,000, against $508,393 registered during year ended April 30, 1929.

Nine months period, which ended January 31, last, is expected to show profits about 9 per cent in advance of those of the corresponding period of last year, which should mean a net around $397,500. Net income for the nine months period of 1928 amounted to $346,630, equal to $1.45 on common.

Easier Money Expected In This District

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

A FURTHER easing in credit conditions is seen by local bankers in line with the reduction made in the rediscount rates of four districts during the past week. The reduction in the rate of the Cleveland Federal Reserve, in which Pittsburgh is located, was generally expected following the cuts made at New York and Richmond.

The Cleveland rate of 4½ per cent is still half a point higher than in the New York and Chicago districts. This reflects the fact that banks in this part of the country have been slower in feeling the changed credit conditions resulting from the collapse of stock prices than larger financial centers.

Bankers believe that the effect of the Reserve Bank announcements will not be sudden or particularly marked since they followed a general increase in the amount of available credit and a decline in interest rates which has been underway since the previous cuts in rediscount rates were made.

Commercial Paper May Drop

FURTHER declines in commercial paper rates are expected in this district in the near future. At present the best names take a 4½ per cent rate, good names are at 4¾ while some of the less desirable paper is at 5 per cent. It is generally expected that the good names will be at 4½ per cent within a short time.

While money has not been as plentiful in Pittsburgh as in New York during the past month, there has been a tendency toward easier conditions for several weeks.

The cut in the New York rediscount rate to 4 per cent was the third reduction made since the break in stocks last October when speculators were using the greatest amount of credit on record. At that time the rediscount rate was at 6 per cent in New York.

Cheap Money World Wide

SINCE that time money has been growing cheaper in almost all parts of the world. The reductions in Federal Reserves rates in this country have been accompanied by corresponding cuts announced by the central banks of most of the European countries as New York ceased to attract funds and money started to flow back into normal channels.

Many bankers believe that this country's export trade will be materially helped by cheaper money. Foreign funds which have been withdrawn from this country will be put to work in their home countries in making needed improvements. This will result in greater demand for American products.

In this connection it is interesting to note that, while exports of manufactured products from this country reached a high level last year, most of the gains were shown in the first four months of 1929. When credit reached its most acute stage last summer it seems to have put the brakes on foreign demand for American products.

Mortgages in Demand

WHILE plentiful money at low rates was expected by many to revive building activity, there has been no evidence so far that this prophesy is to be carried out. Bankers state that there is comparatively little demand for mortgage money. On the contrary attractive mortgages are scarce.

The one type of construction which has actually been helped by cheap money has been road building. Municipal, county and state governments have been able to float bond issues which were held up last year and this has resulted in a sharp gain in the making of public improvements.

The absence of building activity appears to indicate that many parts of the country are over-built so far as residences are concerned. While money rates can help or retard building and other types of business activity, cheap money cannot make business unless a legitimate demand exists.

SHOWS GAIN IN POPULARITY

Although every city has large numbers of restaurants and eating places of every sort and description, few become distinguished and recognized as being superior to the average establishment of its kind. On the other hand one finds that some restaurants have by superlative food and service attracted a large clientele which is ever being augmented as more and more persons find out how good the food and service really are.

A good example of this in the Pittsburgh district is the New Garibaldi Restaurant located at 507 Sixth avenue, directly opposite the William Penn Hotel. This well known establishment has under the direction of Nicolo Marazzi, who is the proprietor and manager, steadily forged ahead to leadership in its field. The New Garibaldi Restaurant has become known far and wide for the excellence and perfection of its cuisine and service and discriminating persons will go far to dine at this delightful restaurant which combines a beautiful and restful atmosphere with the most tempting food that stirs even the most jaded appetite and is conducive to healthful eating and digestion.

In this connection it is interesting to note that medical men and other authorities are unanimous in their opinion as to the value of the Italian cuisine. Italian food as served at the New Garibaldi Restaurant is an excellent indication of how fine a meal one can expect from this type of establishment.

Founder

HOMER J. NEELY

FURNITURE CO. GROWS

Homer Neely, president of the Business Furniture Company, 950 Liberty avenue, is one of Pittsburgh's leading business men who came up through the ranks solely upon his own efforts and in spite of a humble start and many adversities.

Mr. Neely began his furniture experience 27 years ago as an office boy in one of the city's leading establishments at the meager salary of $5 per week.

As time went on he worked into more responsible positions and finally acquired some stock in the company, by which he was employed, and became its secretary. Later he joined a partnership with Charles J. Lynch. When Mr. Lynch passed away in 1923 Mr. Neely assumed full charge of the growing business and has enjoyed a substantial increase each succeeding year. New lines were added from time to time to keep pace with the modern changes.

STARTED IN 1913

The Business Furniture Company was established in 1913 with its first location at 623 Smithfield street. It moved from there to Liberty avenue and has remained there until the present time.

The company handles the products of some of the best known manufacturers in the country. The Art Metal Construction Company, the firm that put steel office furniture on the map in 1888, supplies the company with a complete line of desks, tables, shelving, safes and every type of equipment for the office. Horrocks Desk Company furnishes a line of wooden desks from the most expensive of matched suites down to the least costly. The company also represents the Taylor Chair Company. During the years Mr. Neely has been in business he has been successful in establishing a reputation for integrity which has held his patrons to him year after year.

Mr. Neely is a member of the Rotary Club, Shannopin Country Club, the Keystone Athletic Club and the Chamber of Commerce.

Fewer Surplus Freight Cars On Hand

Class I railroads on January 23 had 438,195 surplus freight cars in good repair and immediately available for service, the car service division of the American Railway Association reports.

This was a decrease of 24,426 cars compared with January 15, at which time there were 462,621.

Surplus coal cars on January 23 totaled 151,148, a decrease of 10,378 cars within approximately a week, while surplus box cars totaled 234,303, a decrease of 11,659 for the same period.

NEW OFFICES OPENED

On Saturday, February 1, the Delaware and Hudson Company moved into its new offices located in the Koppers Building. Their quarters are commodious and laid out particularly to suit their requirements.

The work of fitting this space up for their occupancy was commenced on Monday, January 27. It was necessary to install over 100 lineal feet of tile partition, plastered on both sides, with necessary woodwork and walnut trim, including base and picture mold, also the interior doors and hardware. One of the interior partitions is equipped with borrowed lights, which meant that frames and trim for this glass had to be installed. There was also considerable plumbing and relocating of electrical fixtures, installation of electric plugs and hanging of fixtures, all of which work was completed on Friday, January 31. Linoleum was laid on the floor Friday night, furniture was moved in fairly early Saturday morning and the office was ready for business on Saturday.

It was a very interesting piece of work due to the speed which was necessary, and the schedules of the various building crafts had to be very finely worked out in advance so that each trade would finish their particular part of the work in advance of the craft scheduled to follow. The actual work of fitting up the space was completed in about four and one-half days.

The Delaware and Hudson Company, due to the expeditious work on the part of the building artisans, were enabled to hold a reception for visiting officials, industrial and railroad representatives on Saturday morning.

H. W. Haas, general agent of the Delaware and Hudson Company, was particularly pleased to have this work completed on time and his office force enabled to continue business without any interruption.

MARKET DRIFTS IRREGULARLY LOWER

Railroad Issues Again in Good Demand—Gillette, Westinghouse Decline

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Stock prices drifted irregularly lower at the opening of today's market. Railroad shares, the general index of which reached the highest level since the November break in yesterday's trading, were again in good demand. Canadian Pacific touching a new 1930 high at 220½. Westinghouse Electric dropped 3⅛ points, National Lead 2¾, Electric Auto Lite 1⅜ and Gillette Safety Razor ⅞.

Week-end profit taking and a renewal of bear selling caused futher irregularity during the first hour. A few pools resumed operations in a selected list of public utility and tobacco shares, and some of the rails extended their early gains, but the leading industrials appeared to encounter strong selling resistance.

Baltimore and Ohio, Erie common, Chesapeake Corporation, Lackawanna, and Colorado and Southern all sold 1 to 2 points higher in the first half hour of trading.

American Tobacco issues, 1930 earnings of which are estimated at more than $30 a share if the normal rate of increase and present prices are retained, quickly advanced 4 points.

Stone & Webster ran up 3¼ points, Western Union 2½ and Brooklyn Manhattan Transit and Engineers Public Service a point each.

Simmons ran into further selling despite the publication of a statement that 1929 sales and earnings were the best in the company's history, and that January sales this year ran 9.3 per cent above the same month last year, the stock touching a new low on the current decline at 71¾, off 1½.

Fox Film, Abraham & Straus and Auburn Auto dropped 2 points or more, and Columbian Carbon, Hudson, Best & Co., U. S. Steel and Celotex dropped a point or more.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables unchanged at $4.86½ and the Canadian dollar selling at its best price this year.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN AUTO INDUSTRY

4,600,000-Car Year in 1930 Expectation Of Detroit Forecasters

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER

DETROIT, Feb. 8.—Detroit has to an increasing extent become an industrial weather vane for the whole United States.

As the capital of motordom, this metropolis on Lake St. Clair is enormously sensitive to the ups and downs of the mercurially shifting automobile industry, which has become a balance wheel of prosperity in this country. When the automobile industry started to skid rapidly last July, the stage became set for general business recession. There cannot be substantial business prosperity in 1930 unless automobile sales are at least fairly good.

I have chatted at great length with key executives of the giant automobile industry here, and I gathered the impression that this youthful industry has profited from the recent setback and is now being more prudently managed than ever before. For example, many of the companies, at least for the present, have learned a lesson from last year's experience and are determined not to force sales. Numerous of the large independent companies are showing restraint in releases of cars to dealers, avoiding any pressure which would tend unhealthily to pile up inventories.

PICKUP SEASONAL

The substantial pickup in production since the low point was reached around November 15 is largely seasonal in character. After the show, the manufacturers turn out cars to stock up dealers for the spring consumer demand. January and February are usually relatively poor months for consumer buying, which normally rises to a peak with the advent of spring. Consumer buying since the turn of the year has been no better than the automobile men expected, and has of course been considerably below the abnormally high records set in the corresponding months a year ago, when the industry was on a joyride.

The average of the forecasts is that 4,600,000 cars and trucks will be made and sold this year. If that expectation is fulfilled, the industry will make a substantial contribution to general business activity. Some executives consider anything over 4,000,000 cars a good year. The figure 4,600,000, would approach the best performances of the industry except in 1929, when it ran a full million cars higher. Some of the executives, who anticipate a 25 per cent drop in sales as compared with last year, believe, nevertheless, that the enduring companies will comfortably earn their dividends, especially in view of the numerous price increases. But the measure of prosperity will be in the capacity of manufacturers to keep faith with one another and avoid crowding the market and forcing sales unduly. Of course, in the last analysis the consumer is in the driver's seat, and automobile prosperity depends on his decision to spend or wait. Even waiting will accumulate a pent up demand, which will tend to improve sales in more distant months.

HUDSON PREPARED

Among the individual companies, the Hudson Motor Car Company is attracting much attention locally. It is in the fortunate position of having a radically new line at a time when public sluggishness needs to be overcome with a broadly new appeal.

Roy D. Chapin, chairman of the Hudson Motor Car Company and one of the pioneers in the industry, told me that he expects the net profits of his company to be better in 1930 than in 1929. Of course, last year the company showed good profits in the first three quarters and a loss in the last. This year Mr. Chapin anticipates a slow start but a very good finish. He doesn't predict that his company will sell more cars than last year, though he foresees such prospects for next year. Profits will be helped, he believes, by significant technological changes which have been made in Hudson operating methods and factory layout. For example, Hudson and its junior ally, the Essex, are interchanging parts more than ever before. This means, Mr. Chapin disclosed, that the Hudson, now an eight, has been radically redesigned, and is a far lighter car than before, though just as big.

Mr. Chapin thinks that his company has gone as far as it can with price cuts—that size and other details are now stabilized, and that the next important price reductions will not come until volume has been significantly increased—which he does not believe will occur before 1931.

NO MERGERS SEEN

On account of the growing importance of style, Mr. Chapin anticipates no important automobile mergers in the near future, believing that the existing setups are better suited to style differention and variation.

Mr. Chapin is encouraged by Secretary Lamont's view that road building offers the most immediate move toward carrying out the President's plan to use public works as a business stabilizer. Mr. Chapin believes that the addition of each new mile of roadway tends automatically to sell new cars. This is in line with the theory that the real saturation point is road congestion, rather than limited buying power. Mr. Chapin believe that a good, warm sunshiny spring would enormously stimulate business.

Asked about the longer term outlook for the automobile business, Mr. Chapin said that he was confident as ever, and that like other automobile executives he uses periods of sales recession as opportunities for enlarging his personal investment in the automobile industry.

Mr. Chapin denied that dealer stocks were unwieldy, saying that stocks of his own cars in dealers' hands were smaller than a year ago. Chrysler executives made the same statement to me.

Oil Situation in California Serious

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 8.—Officials of the Standard Oil Company of California concurred in the statements following the Los Angeles oil conservation conference that unless workable conservation plans are laid down and enforced for an extensive period, California's oil situation is headed for demoralization that may be of serious nature.

The necessity for bringing oil producing interests of the state into accord on a definite and sufficient conservation plan is emphasized.

ALLOY STEELS IN DEMAND

Important increases in the demand for steel alloys, notably chrome nickel alloy and stainless chrome steel, are reported by Harry E. Sheldon, president of the Allegheny Steel Corporation. The company's alloy mills at Brackenridge, Pa., are working at full capacity and production has doubled since last August, Mr. Sheldon stated.

"December production of steel alloys showed an increase of 17.8 per cent over the previous high tonnage record, and January production was 30.5 per cent above December," Mr. Sheldon said. "Orders for February shipments are substantially above the January figures."

Much of the increase is due to the Ford Motor Company which recently adopted chrome nickel alloy, known in the trade as Allegheny metal, as standard for the exterior polished parts on the new Ford car, Mr. Sheldon indicated. Ford requirements now represent about 30 per cent of the industry's total output, Mr. Sheldon said, but there is also much heavier demand from hotel, kitchen and dairy equipment manufacturers, and from the oil industry which is now using chrome nickel alloy for condenser and still tubings.

WHITE MOTORS PROFIT UP

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—White Motor Company declared the regular quarterly dividend of 50c a share, payable March 31 to record March 12.

The company reports for year ended December 31, preliminary consolidated net profit of the White Motor Company and subsidiaries, including undistributed earnings of White Motors Securities Corporation and White Motor Realty Company of $2,875,000 after charges and federal taxes, equal to $3.59 a share—par $50.00—on 800,000 shares, as compared with net of $2,320,813 in 1928 or $2.90 a share.

C. L. Bradley, of Cleveland, has been elected a director in place of Walter C. White, deceased.

Canada Wheat Pool Offered Gov't Aid

MONTREAL, Feb. 8.—Beaudry Leman, general manager of the Banque Canadienne Nationale, in a statement to the Canadian press said the voluntary action of the governments of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan in pledging financial aid to the wheat pool, if necessary, "has removed any possibility of wheat being thrown on the market, and should assure its orderly marketing.

"Before the action by the governments," he continued, "no pressure to liquidate present wheat stocks was exerted by the banks, nor do they contemplate any such action."

GRIMES HOLDS OUT FOR BIG SALARY RAISE

PITT INVADES NOTRE DAME

SPORT COMMENT
by JAMES J. LONG

Hope in Grimes Case. Later Agreement Likely. Many Slab Hold-Outs.

Hoyt Explains Stand. Bowen's Longest Race. Rare Girl Champion.

WIDER BUC RIFTS BRIDGED IN PAST

THOUGH the hopes of local baseball fans for an early agreement between the Pittsburgh club and Pitcher Burleigh Grimes in the matter of a 1930 contract were dashed by the failure of the spitball hurler and Vice President Sam Dreyfuss to come to terms at their conference here yesterday afternoon, it does not necessarily follow that the breach is one that cannot be bridged later.

Burleigh Grimes.

Admittedly, the situation has become more serious than was anticipated. Contrary to reports of previous disputes, there had been no exchange of salary views until yesterday, and up to that time there was every ground for the confidence that when the management and the pitcher got together for a heart-to-heart talk they would quickly reach an understanding.

But the outcome of the confab was altogether different. Neither side would recede an inch from the stand taken when both laid their cards on the table. The club declared that its offer was final, and Grimes was equally positive in his statement that there would be no change in his own figures.

IN VIEW of the admission by Vice President Dreyfuss that he and the spitballer are "miles apart," there would appear to be little chance of an early compromise, particularly as the club says that Grimes' demands will not be met, and Grimes himself is known to be a hard-headed business man who is not to be easily budged from a stand once taken.

However, agreements have eventually been reached in similar cases of salary differences that appeared to be equally hopeless. The financial rift between Grimes and the club is believed to be not as wide as the one of $6,000 between the Pirate owners and Outfielder Paul Waner a year ago. Nor is there any greater stubbornness in prospect on either side than was in evidence when Pitcher Vic Aldridge was a holdout in 1925. Those cases and others were fixed up before the season opened, and in all probability the Grimes split will not be different.

IT'S an unusual off-season for salary balks in the major league pitching ranks. Grimes is only one more addition to a long list of hurlers who have refused to sign, including Waite Hoyt, Bill Walker, Jack Scott, Dazzy Vance and others.

Hoyt has just made public some of the details of his dispute with the Yankee management. There is a difference of $6,000 between the pitcher and the club, probably a larger sum than separates Grimes and his Pittsburgh employers.

Waite Hoyt.

HOYT'S salary last season was $17,500. The contract offered to him for 1930 called for the same amount contingent on the pitcher's winning 15 games, and provided that if he failed to win that many contests he would receive only $11,500. Hoyt demands a one-year contract at $17,500, without any "ifs" or "buts." "The Yankee owners are against giving contracts for more than one year to veteran players, and I agree with them that their policy is wise," said Hoyt. "All I want is a one-year contract, but I want it on a straight salary basis, just as it was last year.

"IN ITS attitude toward the players dissatisfied with their contracts, the Yankee management has stressed the huge amount of money it has paid to the men in recent years," continued Waite. "Sure, it has paid the players a lot of money, but the players have delivered, haven't they?

"Six pennants and three world championships in a space of nine years is pretty good, isn't it? Think of the clubs that have spent almost as much money as the Yankees—and in some cases perhaps fully as much—without getting any results other than headaches."

PETE BOWEN, University of Pittsburgh fleet-foot, has been starring at 100, 200 and 440 yards, and in Newark, N. J., last Tuesday night, tried the 500-yard distance, finishing second. Tonight he will be tested for the first time over a longer route, being entered in the famous "Millrose 600," feature of the annual Millrose A. A. indoor meet at Madison Square Garden in New York.

Local track followers are waiting eagerly to note how well Pete can stand up under the strain of this new distance. He will be opposed by Bernie McCafferty, last year's winner; Eddie Roll, of Newark, and Phil Edwards, of N. Y. U.

Pete Bowen.

EASTERN experts think well of Bowen's chances. They figure that the hard-pounding style typified by Ray Barbuti, who tried the indoor sprint game this week with poor results, is an asset of Bowen's that is generally an advantage on indoor tracks. It enables a runner to jump his field on the straightaway and they think it may help the Pitt runner to win tonight's feature and take his place alongside such other famous victors as Ted Meredith, Dave Caldwell, Earl Eby, Alan Helfrich and McCafferty. Helfrich won it five times. McCafferty will gain permanent possession of the John Wanamaker, Jr., Trophy if the winner tonight fails to beat his 1929 time of 1 minutes 23 3-5 seconds. In the event that there is no double winner over a three-year period of competition, the trophy goes to the runner making the fastest time in that period.

FROM two Oakland sportsmen comes a query as to whether or not a football game between Pitt and W. & J. ever drew a crowd large enough to fill Forbes Field while the old rivals were playing their annual gridiron contests at the home of the Pirates. More than one gathering of that size was attracted by the Panthers and Presidents, the fans overflowing the stands and standing on the field. That was before the right-field grandstand addition was erected.

The first occasion was in 1915, the year in which Bob Peck received Pitt's all-America award from Walter Camp, and a game which the Panthers won, 19 to 0. A photograph showing the filled stands and the fans on the field still graces one of the office walls at Pirate headquarters. The paid attendance was 28,300, and the total exceeded 30,000. Twice later Pitt-W. & J. games drew capacity crowds of 30,750, or slightly more. In 1923 the Pitt-W. & J. meeting drew 31,000 persons, the limit at that time, but on Thanksgiving Day of the same year arrangements were made to allow 1,500 additional fans to purchase standing room in the grandstand, with the result that the Pitt-Penn State contest was witnessed by 32,300.

WHATEVER else may be said of him, Primo Carnera must be said to look plenty healthy, yet a Brooklyn physician, Dr. Leon G. Fisher, pronounces him a victim of a glandular disease. "From pub-

RUTH CELEBRATES

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Babe Ruth celebrated his thirty-sixth birthday at a dinner given in his honor by admirers here yesterday. A great platter of congratulatory telegrams was on the table. Reference to the Babe's contract dispute with the New York Yankees was scrupulously avoided.

POLLOCK, GUIDO BARRED

PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—The State Athletic Commission yesterday announced the indefinite suspension of the following boxers: Young Guido, Youngstown, O.; Steve Pollock, Pittsburgh; Gaby Bandad and Paulie Walker, New York City, and Young Jack Thompson, Chicago. Jack De Neri, Cleveland, was suspended for 30 days.

BREACH WIDENS BETWEEN BUCS, STAR HURLER

By CHARLES J. DOYLE.

Burleigh Grimes, of the Pirates, today was well within the ranks of the holdout brigade, and this with the date of departure for spring training little more than a week away.

The star pitcher and his employers are farther apart than ever after an unsuccessful effort to get together yesterday. Burleigh and Sam Dreyfuss, vice president of the Buccos, had a short conference on the question of a 1930 contract for the brilliant pitcher.

PROSPECT GLOOMY

The meeting of the magnate and player came to an abrupt end and with no definite prospect of any further negotiations.

"We're miles apart, and I have no idea as to what the outcome of the case may be," the son of the Pirate owner admitted after meeting with Grimes.

Judging by the manner of the two principals, the gap represents a huge sum of money. The pitcher is said to be the highest-paid player on the Pittsburgh club, but he apparently is determined as regards a substantial increase in salary.

BARRED IN CAMP

At the winter meeting in New York, Grimes indicated that he should be paid as much as Dazzy Vance drew down last season. Vance collected $25,000 for his 1929 contract, but he is likely to be subjected to a reduction in pay owing to his bad year. Grimes, according to other baseball men, is not so far below the $20,000 mark in pay on top of a succession of big years, but his bosses have declared that he will not get anything like the amount accredited to Vance. And there the matter seems to stand.

Prospects for Grimes leaving for Paso Robles with the club one week from Tuesday are admittedly not bright.

"There will be no players in camp who are not signed," said Dreyfuss, who has to comply with the laws of the sport in this connection. Unsigned players are not allowed to go into training.

EASY TO CONDITION

The absence of Grimes from the Paso Robles camp would confuse the plans of Manager Ens to some extent, yet the effect might not be serious, provided Burleigh joined his mates in time to get in three or four weeks of preparation. The Wisconsin wildcat generally is in good condition and is one of the first of the players to reach top form after landing at the preparatory camp. Nevertheless, both sides would be relieved if the important matter were completed.

The player put down his terms and the club offered its figures, and both sides said it was a final quotation. This would seem to augur for a long standoff fight.

Burleigh was accompanied to the Pittsburgh office by Attorney Stewart McKenry, of Canton. The latter is counsel for the pitcher in Burleigh's suit for divorce, which is to come up soon. The attorney and Grimes gathered data for their case while at the baseball office.

KLEIN RETURNS CONTRACT

INDIANAPOLIS, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Chuck Klein, home run champion of the National League last season, has returned his contract unsigned to the Philadelphia club, of the National League.

Klein, whose home is in Indianapolis, said he made no counter proposition, but simply returned the document without his signature. He made 43 home runs last year, his first full season in a major loop. His batting average was .355.

Klein said he did not classify himself as a holdout, and fully expected to be back in the outfield for the Phillies next summer. The star ball player declined to discuss reports that he demanded a salary of $15,000 a year, other than to say he had made no demands on any one.

YESTERDAY'S EXPLANATIONS: CHUBBY LUCIUS HAD 33 CHILDREN—Lucius' home is Bay City, Mich. He was born in 1832 and was married four times. In a statement to the press some years ago, he gave as his motto "Marry young and have many children—they keep you young." At that time he had one child 67 years old and the youngest was a babe in arms. THE POINTING PIG—"The Dog Book," by James Hatson, pages 296 and 297, contains an account of this unusual pig. Edward Toomer, one of the King's keepers in New Forest (England), actually broke a black pig to find game and to back and stand. Toomer sold the pig to Sir H. Mildmay, who kept her until she was 10 years old and too fat for this service. A BLOW OF A HAMMER WILL FREEZE WATER—Mr. W. H. Smyth, of Berkeley, Cal., noted engineer and author, explains that when the hammer strikes the piston the sudden pressure causes the water to heat and absorb some air. When the piston is suddenly released the air pressure is likewise suddenly lowered and this causes the absorbed air in the heated water to be rapidly released, with considerable evaporation. The heat lost by conduction to and through cylinder walls, and by the water to the expanding air and vapor, will cause the remaining water to cool very rapidly to below the freezing point, hence ice will result.

A basketball team good enough to win 34 games in a row, and one which hasn't won many more than that, but that is just tough and ambitious enough to knock off the best of 'em just at the time the best are least expecting to be knocked, appear in Pittsburgh tonight, meeting Duquesne and Tech, respectively.

Ganzy Benedict

The third of the local triumvirate, Pitt, swings into action out of town, playing a return game with Notre Dame at South Bend.

This team that won those 34 ball games in succession, Loyola University of Chicago, will meet the Dukes before an ultra-capacity house on the Bluff. The other outfit, Thiel College, engages Tech in the Tartans' gym. The Loyola-Duke game will be the second of the year between the two fives, the Chicago Irish having dumped the locals earlier in the campaign in Chicago. Tech and Thiel have not met before this year.

DUKES SEEK REVENGE

Where the motif of the Dukes' play tonight against Loyola will be revenge, Tech ties into Thiel hoping to win its first victory of the year. The chances for a Skibo triumph appear good, although Thiel was strong enough to beat Grove City, and hold the Dukes and Bethany to exceedingly close margins. Tech has had a two-week rest from actual play.

This Loyola outfit comes very highly touted. Purdue, reigning champion in the Western Conference, had to take advantage of off-color foul shooting by the Chicagoans to stop their whirlwind winning streak last week. And Purdue boasts one of the best teams in the country.

Duquesne hopes fervently that Ganzy Benedict, captain of the varsity, will be able to go at top

PIRATES LEAVE FOR DETROIT TONIGHT

By CARL W. SHATTO

Garry Schmeelk, who gained considerable experience as a manager while leading his and other gentlemen's clubs in the American Professional Basketball League, will try his hand at managing a hockey club tonight when the Pirate icemen leave for Detroit, where they meet the Cougars tomorrow.

Garry, who has served as secretary of the Bucs since the season opened, was elected to serve as the big boss last night when Manager Frank Frederickson left to tour Mid-Western states and three Canadian provinces in an effort to line up some new ice talent for next season. Freddie will be absent for at least two weeks, and during that time Schmeelk will play the dual role of secretary-manager. It is a big job, but Garry is a big man. He tips the beam at about 250 pounds.

Pilot Schmeelk will have a very able assistant in Hib Milks, veteran star who is to direct the team on the ice. Hib has had some experience in giving the Bucs instructions when in battle, and he commands the respect of every man on the team.

NEW LINEUP LIKELY

Tomorrow's game will mark the Pirates' last regularly scheduled appearance in Detroit this season, and the locals are conceded an even chance of pulling out their first away-from-home victory of the season. In four meetings with the Michiganders the Bucs have gained two decisions.

LOCAL AMATEUR BOXERS LOSE AND DRAW

CLEVELAND, Feb. 8.—Joey Speigel, Pittsburgh lightweight, outpointed Ernie Schwartz, local star, in a three-round bout here last night to save the Steel City novices from a complete rout at the hands of Cleveland's inter-city amateur team.

The local squad coasted to a 5-to-1 decision, winning three battles via the knockout route.

Joe Polumbo, who has been winning consistently of late, turned in another kayo triumph, halting John Nagy, of Pittsburgh, in the second. Don Parker and Earl Workman were the other Pittsburgh amateurs to hit the canvas. Heinie Gechter dropped Workman in the second, while Danny Schalk technically kayoed Parker in the second. The summary:

112 pounds—Joe Polumbo, Cleveland, knocked out John Nagy, Pittsburgh, two rounds.

126 pounds—Herb Randall, Cleveland, defeated Jimmy Jeannette, Pittsburgh, three rounds; Joey Spiegel, Pittsburgh, defeated Ernie Schwartz, Cleveland, three rounds.

LOCALS GET DRAW

Milwaukee, Feb. 8.—Six amateur boxers representing the Pittsburgh district held the undefeated Milwaukee Eagles team even in an inter-city contest here last night. Each team won three contests, but the only knockout was scored by Johnny Warner of Pittsburgh, who chilled Milton Babitz in the second round.

Two atrocious decisions were given, but fortunately both teams

PRESIDENTS ON TOP

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Feb. 8.—Lehigh dropped a weirdly played game to Washington and Jefferson here last night, 24 to 23. Lehigh's floor work and passing were away off color and their basket shooting equally as poor. The visitors showed a speedy defense, while, on the other hand, Lehigh's defense was as open as a sieve. Hamilton and Umberger slipping through for easy shots from under the basket.

LOCAL BOXERS WIN, DRAW

were victims. Eddie Hebner, Pittsburgh, 138-pounder, who met Frank Musha in the main event, was deprived of a well-earned victory. Musha, a wild man, forced the fighting but ringsiders thought his smart punching and airtight defensive work gave him a margin.

Don Asto of Pittsburgh, received a gift in the second preliminary when he was given the nod over Al Sniadock, Milwaukee featherweight.

Eddie Oster, Milwaukee, middleweight, trounced Billy Winso decisively for two rounds, but weakened in the third to permit the invader to pull almost to even terms. Oster's free punching in the first two periods was his margin, although a fourth round undoubtedly would have put Billy in front, judging him on his efforts in the third round.

Charles Crovatitta, Pitt junior welter, could not escape the sharp counters of George Black and lost the decision in three rounds.

Ebbetts Is Beaten; Trafton Stops Criss

CHICAGO, Feb. 8. — (AP.) — Clyde Chastain, promising young middleweight of Dallas, Tex., scored a surprising victory over Harry Ebbetts, of Brooklyn, rated as the hardest hitting 160-pounder in the country, in 10 smashing rounds, headling Promoter Jack Dempsey's show at the Coliseum last night.

George Trafton, the one and only conqueror of Charles Shires, avenged the fair name of "The Great One" by knocking out Battling Criss, Detroit heavyweight, in the third round. Trafton, a Chicago professional football player, floored Criss four times in the third round.

GUTIERREZ SUSPENDED

HAVANA, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Luis Gutierrez, manager of Kid Chocolate, featherweight champion of Cuba, was today suspended for a year yesterday by the Cuban National Boxing Commission, along with his stable of boxers. The suspension followed a heated argument between Gutierrez and a member of the commission at a set of matches promoted here recently by the manager.

Moe and Joe—

Say it with DAFFODIL, in the sixth race, as their Best Bet at Miami today. Their Long Shot Special is BRUSH, in the fifth race.

Both of Moe and Joe's selections yesterday were scratched.

Carter Is Named Brooklyn Director

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Peace and harmony, perforce, ruled the Brooklyn National League Club today with Walter P. (Dutch) Carter, famous Yale pitcher of 35 years ago, sitting in the driver's seat.

Appointed by John A. Heydler, president of the National League, as fifth director of the Brooklyn Club, Carter holds the balance of power since the other four directorships are evenly distributed among members of the so-called Robinson and McKeever factions, whose long warfare was ended the other day by official decree of the National League.

BASS FOULS FULLER IN FIFTH

BOSTON, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Sammy Fuller, featherweight champion of New England, stepped into the junior-lightweight class here last night and defeated Benny Bass, of Philadelphia, junior-lightweight champion, on a foul in the fifth round of their scheduled 10-round bout.

Bass consistently offended in the opening rounds against the hard-hitting little local man. He was warned in the third round after hitting Fuller two low punches, and in the fifth dropped Fuller dead in his tracks with a terrific left hook below the belt. Fuller was carried from the ring several minutes later.

Because of a big margin in the third round, Fuller had a clear lead when the bout ended.

It was a non-title affair. Bass weighed 129 pounds and his opponent 131½. Because of the foul, Bass automatically drew 30 days suspension.

PIRRONE STOPS STEVENS

ERIE, Pa., Feb. 8.—Beltin' Paul Pirrone, Cleveland's up and coming welterweight, knocked out Frankie Stevens, game little Boston battler, in the seventh round of the scheduled 10-round main event at the auditorium here last night, flooring his opponent with a terrific left hook to the pit of the stomach.

Stevens had slightly the better of the going at the end of the fifth round, outboxing the Cleveland youngster and getting in some effective body blows. A left hook to the jaw floored Frankie for a nine count in the sixth chapter, however, and a few seconds later he was down again, this time from a right to the body. He was able to hang on until the end of the round, but was badly weakened by the damaging body blows dealt by Pirrone.

Joey Coffman, of Buffalo, gained a decision over Jackie Murray, Pittsburgh Negro, in the 10-round semi-final in one of the most wretched exhibitions seen here in some time. Murray refused to fight, crawling into a shell and only on rare occasions letting fly with a right which, when it landed, never failed to hurt Coffman.

Matty Oldach, of Erie, outpointed Whitey Stevenson, of Erie, in six rounds, and Joe Boler, of Erie, outpointed Ray Scanlon, of Warren, O., in the four-round opener.

SACCO BEATS GANS

FRANKLIN, Pa., Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Johnny Sacco, of Buffalo, N. Y., won a decision from California Joe Gans, Gary, Ind., Negro, in 10 rounds here last night. Sacco had the best of the fight most of the way.

Tommy Heilman, Monessen, won a decision in six rounds from Ray Collins, at Erie, and Alan Beatty, Pittsburgh, won a similar verdict over Jack Lewis, of Buffalo.

Bad News Maestro, Buffalo, was knocked out by Young Kid Haslett, Franklin, in the second round.

MADGE QUITS TO RANDALL AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK,
Sports Editor.

Real ring courage triumphed over an exhibition of stupid fighting and a seemingly craven heart as Tiger Joe Randall, Elizabeth (Pa.) Negro, "knocked out" Larry Madge, of Cleveland, in the eighth round of their scheduled 10-round main bout in the Moose Temple last night.

Madge quit cold, going down from a powder puff right on the side of the face and taking a siesta in his own corner until the referee counted him out and then immediately scrambling to his feet. In his dressing room, later, he claimed a punch had driven his tongue between some bridgework in his mouth and that he was unable to loosen it. His money was not held up.

Standing out in bold contrast to Madge's feeble-hearted display was the fight put up by Randall. Punched around in the first round and floored for a count of eight and having his left eye almost closed in the second, he came back to force the fighting in the third and drop Madge momentarily with a right to the chin.

RANDALL INJURES LEG

From then on Madge was a beaten fighter. He protested a left to the body by Randall as the fourth round opened and the Tiger continued to take the play away from him until suddenly, just when he was going at his best, Randall pulled a tendon in his right leg and it was all he could do to navigate until the finish of the round. Madge's slow thinking and Joe's own good generalship, however, enabled the latter to get by.

The fifth round went to Madge with Randall almost helpless as he dragged his game leg about the ring, a mark for Larry to such an extent that fans were yelling for the referee to stop the fight or to have the towel thrown in. Randall fell down at the start for a count of two and got up only with difficulty. His natural shiftness and pluck again carried him through against the slow-moving Madge.

Randall's seconds massaged his injured leg between rounds and he was able to move a little better on it as the sixth round opened. In a slugging exchange, both landed with rights to the head and Madge was hurt. He backed to the ropes in a neutral corner as Randall, steadying himself by moving in close and leaning his body against his opponent's, punched away without a return. Madge managed to weather the storm, but not without the damage of a cut on his left eye in addition to his dizzy condition.

The Tiger continued the aggressor on his improving leg in the seventh and handily outfought the always waiting Madge. The eighth was a repetition until Madge suddenly amazed the onlookers by folding up under one of the lightest punches of the bout for the full count. The end came after two minutes 20 seconds of the round. Randall weighed 145¼ pounds and Madge 142½ at 3 p. m., but Madge sported a distinct advantake in height and reach.

WILSON PROVES SURPRISE

Danny Russell, of Braddock, and formerly of Baltimore, outfought Joe Zink, of McKees Rocks, all of the way after a close opening round in the six-round semi-final. Russell never stopped leading and punching and made a hit with the fans. He scaled 148 pounds against 143½ for Zink.

Jimmy Conrad and Irish Kane uncorked a surprise package in the person of Jack Wilson, of Jersey City, subbing on short notice for Billy Flanagan, of Clearfield, Pa., against Georgie Chambers, of the East End, in the second bout. Wilson, tall and rangy and showing unmistakable signs of experience and class, stepped into his opponent from the opening bell and never gave him a chance. He punched him around with both hands and soon had him holding and covering and finally pounded him out on his feet as the bell ended the opening round. Two left hooks finished Chambers as the second round got under way. The first spilled him for a count of five, from which he got up dazed, and his seconds threw in the towel as Georgie went down again. Both weighed 157 pounds.

Johnny Montabano, of Braddock, 127¾ pounds, making his first professional appearance, boxed in pleasing style to best Paul Balint, of the North Side, 126½, in the six-round opener.

MAYBERRY, DUNN NEXT

A fair-sized crowd witnessed the bouts. It was announced that next week's show, featuring Johnny Dunn, of New Kensington, and Howard Mayberry, of Donora, star bantams, will be held on Wednesday night instead of Friday because the hall will not be available on the usual date.

Joe Keally refereed all bouts, while Frank Brown and Red Robinson were the judges. Chappie Couch was at the bell and Bill Schuster did the announcing.

NATIONAL CUP CONFAB HERE TONIGHT

By TOM BIRKS

A special meeting of the National amateur cup committee will be held this evening, with Secretary John McEwan, of Cleveland, in charge. The Gallatin-Glendale game will be aired, together with the Thoms Run-Heidelberg Eagles affair, and decisions may be rendered in each case.

Two games will be played this afternoon, both being scheduled in the District League. Crafton will tangle with the Pierpoint Club, while Douglas and the Celtics will do their stuff at Swissvale. The Pierpoints should have no trouble winning their game. The real afternoon's sport should be flashed at Swissvale.

HUNTER PLAYS SELIGSON

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Two players of different tennis generations, but remarkably similar styles on the court meet today for the National indoor singles championship.

Frank Hunter, 35-year-old New Rochelle newspaper publisher, encounters Julius Seligson, Lehigh University senior, in what promises to be a battle of baseline drives.

Hunter is the favorite, having beaten Seligson in all four of their previous meetings, but the Lehigh player demonstrated in his semi-final round victory over Gilbert Hall yesterday, at 6-4, 7-5, 6-2, that he is in the best form of his career.

The finalists for the doubles title, won last year by Tilden and Hunter are Dick Murphy, Utica, N. Y., and Harris Corgeshall, Des Moines, Iowa, vs Rockafellow and Merritt Cutler, New York.

form tonight. If Ganzy can click, the chances of the Red and Blue will be vastly improved. He played good ball against Geneva Tuesday night.

PITT FACES TROUBLE

The Panthers, having re-established themselves as a winning team, beating Fordham this week after losing to Syracuse, will have more than the usual peck of trouble with Notre Dame tonight. Boy, how the Irish hate to lose two games the same season to one team! And how they'll go against Pitt! It would not be so bad if the Panthers hadn't made monkeys out of them here, but such a decisive licking served to stir the Irish to a high pitch.

Other games on tonight's card include the West Virginia-New York University game in Gotham; Grove City's meeting with John Carroll in Cleveland; the Wash.-Jeff. and Temple affair in Philadelphia and the St. Vincent's-Pitt Junior College (Johnstown) game at Johnstown.

PETE IN "600"

Pete Bowen, Pitt sprinter, will attempt the 600-yard distance tonight, running in the famous "Millrose 600" in New York. Pete pulled himself up to second place Wednesday night in Newark, running over the 500 yard distance. He will be competing in the annual Millrose A. A. games.

If you like to watch swimming meets, and care not for basketball, you can round out your day by attending the Pitt and Wash.-Jeff. dual varsity engagement in the Keystone A. C. pool. In a preliminary splashing event, the Panther freshmen will swim against Jim Marks' Kiski mermen.

If you don't like swimming meets, I might recommend a nice quiet evening seeking diligently for the deuces. You can never find 'em, but you get a lot of fun just looking.

Long's Sport Comment

lished photographs of Carnera it can readily be noted that this Italian pugilist is suffering from an advanced case of Acromegaly, a dysfunction of the pituitary gland," says the doctor.

"This giant should be with a circus selling his pictures, from a platform, instead of trading blows in a prize ring, with a fatal result to himself no remote possibility."

Sonja Henie.

WHEN exceptionally consistent champions in the various lines of sport competition are being listed or discussed, one who cannot be overlooked is Miss Sonja Henie, of Oslo, Norway. The exhibition given by this 17-year-old girl in winning the women's world figure-skating championship in New York this week, the first holding of the annual world figure-skating championship in New York this week, the first holding of the annual world tournament in the United States, was impressive enough in itself, but the true measure of her ability is not realized until it is understood that this is the fourth consecutive time she has won the title. She completely eclipsed all rivals in the New York carnival, and her performance was pronounced by the judges the greatest combination of spins, jumps, spirals, figures, poise, grace, attractiveness, agility and showmanship ever presented by any woman skater on American ice. Miss Henie is as supreme in her field as is Helen Wills in women's tennis. She is a member of a family long prominent in sports. Her father won the bicycle championship of the world at Antwerp in 1893.

PIRATES LEAVE TONIGHT

last night. Frederickson intimated that Milks would be back at center on the starting front line in the Detroit engagement. This means that Gordon Fraser will be moved back to defense.

Cliff Barton will perform at right wing on the spare front line, taking the place of Tex White, veteran forward who was sent to the New Haven Club of the Eastern League, yesterday. White is to remain with the New Haven sextet for the remainder of the season and he will be sold to the Eastern Leaguers in the event that they wish to make the purchase.

START MARATHON

The Pirates will go from Detroit to Fort Erie, Ont., where they will meet the Boston Bruins on Wednesday in a game which originally was scheduled to be played here tonight. From Fort Erie Schmeelk will lead his warriors to New York, where they will be the guests of the Rangers on Thursday. Next Saturday will find the Bucs in Montreal for a joust with the Maroons, and on the following Tuesday (February 18) they will finish their Marathon in Ottawa.

On February 20 the Toronto Leafs will help the locals put on a "homecoming" celebration at Duquesne Garden.

Manager Frederickson, in Toronto today, will go from the Ontario metropolis to Port William, Port Arthur and Port Francis in Western Ontario. He obtained Bud Jarvis and Cliff Barton from Port Arthur, and Goalie Andy Spooner from Port William, and he hopes to unearth other young players of their calibre in that territory. From Port Francis, the Bucco boss will go to Winnepeg, in the province of Manitoba, and Boissbain, Regina, Moose Jaw and Melville, all in the province of Saskatchawan, are the next stops on his list.

SEEKS NEW TALENT

After he has scouted the Canadian minor league teams, Frederickson will visit Minneapolis, St. Paul and other cities supporting teams in the American Association. He expects to pick up enough new talent to make the Pirates a title contender next season.

Spooner, the locals' spare goalie, accompanied Frederickson on the trip. The Pittsburgh skipper wants the young net guardian to get plenty of experience, and he plans to place him with a minor league club that will permit him to work regularly.

Eleanor Holm Sets Canadian Record

OTTAWA, Ont. Feb. 8.—(AP.)—Eleanor Holm, of New York, set a new Canadian record of 1 minute 13 3-5 seconds in winning the 100-yard backstroke title at the Canadian women's swimming championships here last night.

Wilson Would End Career Behind Bat

Hack Wilson, slugging outfielder of the Chicago Cubs, hopes to wind up his playing days as a catcher. He confided this ambition to Honus Wagner, veteran former Pirate star, during his visit here for the annual dinner of the local chapter of the Baseball Writers' Assocation of America, Thursday night, Honus revealed today.

Hack told Honus he is looking forward to the day when he will be unable to get by in the outfield and believes that he is built more for the role of a receiver than any other position on the team and will get in some practice licks for the job as soon as possible.

Varied Features Offered On Radio Tonight

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Sun-Telegraph Radio Editor.

THE theater, the Land o' Heather, the newspaper, the laundry, the Boy Scouts and the Ship of Memory are a few pictures called to mind in tonight's radio repertoire.

KDKA will have two new NBC features, the Ship of Memory at 10 o'clock and the Miniature Theater at 10:30.

A revue, "Blue Skies," will draw the spot during the 10 o'clock Paramount Hour through WJAS.

Boy Scouts of America will observe the twentieth anniversary of their organization in programs to be broadcast by KDKA at 8 and WJAS at 8:30.

We Now Present

CHECK!

Amos plays the part of Kingfish, we have learned from a reliable authority in the NBC studios. A news release sometime ago stated that Andy played the part.

Glenn Riggs, voice at Kay Dee, corroborates the information. While in New York several weeks ago Glenn heard Amos and Andy using their dialect in a corridor of the NBC. Andy was simply "Andy" and Amos was the Kingfish, sayeth Mr. Riggs. Double check!

Clerks at a downtown express office who have always used the term "check" as a tally in going over accounts, have been much annoyed lately by customers butting in with "double check!" as a bit of Amos-Andy humor.

HOW OLD'S McNAMEE?

Alfons Wranitzky, 208 Glenwood avenue, Hazelwood — Yes, "electrical transcription" is just another word for phonograph record. Harvey Hays plays the lead in Empire Builders, KDKA on Monday night. WGN is in Chicago. Milton J. Cross and Graham McNamee are about the same age—37.

H. J. Halstead, Belle Vernon, Pa.—Newspapers have no quarrel to pick with W. K. Henderson, owner of KWKH. The Sun-Telegraph lists KWKH programs daily. This station finished among the first 10 in our recent radio poll.

ONE FOR RIPLEY

R. J. Immel, of the Immel Company, 5602 Penn avenue, has a four-tube table model set without aerial, ground or loud-speaker that emanates signals of all local broadcasting stations clearly and distinctly. The coils act as a speaker, engineers claim.

The story is told that a Mrs. J. E. Richardson, of Mt. Lebanon, won a $100 wager recently by distinguishing the voice of Tom Morris, baritone, on a KDKA program. Morris went on the program unannounced. Mrs. Richardson said it sounded like Tom; her husband said it wasn't. A telephone call verified Mrs. Richardson's hunch and a new frock now decorates the madame's wardrobe.

When Don Bestor stops in Kansas City, his programs will be broadcast over WDAF.

TODAY'S TID BIT:

The networks linking KDKA and WCAE use daily 16,000 miles of specially engineered telephone wiring.

"CHICKIE"

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Chickie Bryce, only daughter of a devoted father and mother, is attending business college when the story opens. Arthur Sontag, a classmate, takes her to a dance and she confides to her friend, Mary Blake, that the avenues of romance are opening to her. Chickie's father fears the pitfalls ahead of his daughter, but his wife allays his fears. Chickie imagines she is in love with Arthur. Mary and Chickie blandly discuss love and marriage. Mary says it's too sordid for her, but Chickie thinks it will be all kisses and "walking on the mountain tops with her sweetheart by her side." Arthur stops calling on her and she feels heartbroken.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

Finds a Job
Gets First Position in a Brokerage Office

She began to look forward with frightened eagerness to work—to the moment when she would leave the gentle quiet of Jonathan's little yellow cottage and go into a business office—a tremendous thing in the life of a girl not yet 18.

At the school the girls were all on fire with excitement. What kind of a job would they get? Suppose they ... everything!

Meets Janina
To Is New Acquaintance About Herself

There were four of them in the room, and one that the others called "Janina" flashed out as though made of flames. She was a young Pole, dark with black hair drawn Grecian fashion to the nape of her neck. She had pale olive skin—a too prominent nose and red, clean-cut lips, the upper one short, curling. Striking—even handsome in a hard, glittering way. Chickie was drawn by the extraordinary brilliance of the girl's dark eyes.

Their glances met and the dark one smiled. It made her whole face intensely vivid as though suddenly struck with light.

That very first noon when Chickie came back from lunch, Janina met her in the dressing room. She took off her hat and with prima donna nonchalance dropped it on the waste basket. She began combing her black hair.

Then she noticed Chickie.

"This is your first job?"

Chickie answered stiffly. "Yes, it is."

Janina, pulling her hair out the merest trifle coolly, put her through a cross-examination. How old ...

Then Janina, extremely busy with her lip stick, laughed. "Eighteen! Poor proud and pale Chickie!"

Oh, Chickie gasped.

Janina's eyes crinkled with amusement. "Remember, little one, one cautioned ... poor and pale is always lonely."

Chickie turned scarlet. She had scarcely recovered from the shock of this first when she was still guessing at the dark, guilty meaning of Janina's words when the young Pole, not heeding the gayety of Chickie's heart, ...

Janina's Wisdom
Her Sophistication Draws Like a Magnet

It was an afternoon toward the end of her second week. The window of the dressing room looked down over office buildings and far out even to the clear blue of the bay. Chickie was idling here a moment ...

In one office a girl came in ... took off her hat. Then the girl was sitting at a desk in the corner. A man entered. He sat on the edge of the desk. The two began to talk.

How nice and friendly Chickie thought. Peasant to be working. Just then Janina opened the door. Leaning over Chickie's shoulder just then, too, the man gripped the girl's hand. They were both laughing.

"Cozy, eh! Wonder how Mrs. Turner would like that?" Janina mocked.

"Mrs. Turner? Why should she care?" Chickie asked, mystified.

"She shouldn't! But wives are all stupid. They do care!"

"Oh—you mean that man is married?"

Is he? And has three kids to boot!"

"Oh! Oh, isn't it awful!"

Janina's eyes curled. "What's awful about it? A man's still human, isn't he, for all that the marriage vow ... to turn him into a dumbbell? He has eyes, still and a heart. Fudge! The married men are all married."

Chickie's eyes burned ... she felt a curious heat rushing up to her neck.

"You mean they all do things like that?"

Janina's mouth pursed in pity. "Nine out of ten! Official statistics!"

Chickie felt a sudden, hard aversion for this mocking superior Janina. She said angrily: "I don't believe it! I don't believe it!"

But the thought went into her heart and chilled there heavy and cold like a stone.

Yet Janina's wisdom, Janina's immense sophistication drew her like a magnet, like a hunger at once cruel yet irresistible. She was soon listening, soon flushed and eager as the others of Janina's following.

The girls in the office had a habit of running into the dressing room for a little chat or a secret smoke. Here Janina held court. She gave out vivid advice about men, about life, about love. She was consulted and ... as a kind of Delphic oracle.

KELSCH, OTHERS GET DRY TERMS

Mose Kelsch, well-known independent football player and former North Side saloonkeeper, was sentenced to serve three months in the Erie county jail and pay a $500 fine by Federal Judge R. M. Gibson when he pleaded guilty of violating the prohibition law.

Seventeen other defendants, one a woman, who entered pleas to liquor violations were given jail terms ranging from 15 days to two months.

The indictment to which Kelsch pleaded charged him with possession and transportation of whiskey and the destruction of 42 gallons of whiskey to prevent its seizure by prohibition agents.

The woman defendant was Mary T. Hallen who was given the 15-day term when she admitted selling and possessing liquor and maintaining a common nuisance in a building on the Clairton road, Baldwin township.

Five other defendants in liquor cases were fined $100 to $150. The others received jail terms as follows: Pete Dotre, Pittsburgh, 30 days; Harry Rosen, Pittsburgh, two months; Mack Potten, Pittsburgh, 30 days; George Smith, Pittsburgh, 30 days; William J. Patton, Pittsburgh, 30 days; Edward L. Lippert, Mt. Oliver, 30 days; Charles O'Donnell, Pittsburgh, 30 days; Roy P. ACCUSES MATE AS BIGAMIST

Released from the county jail Wednesday, Fred Elder, 47, was back in jail again this morning, facing more serious charges. Justice of the Peace F. V. Sabino last night held Elder for jail on charges of bigamy, assault and battery and surety of the peace. The charges were preferred by Mrs. Alice Smith Elder, 40, of 553 Cores avenue, Braddock, said to be wife No. 2.

Elder had served a short jail sentence for disorderly conduct and when he was released Wednesday he was met by a constable from Sabino's office. Mrs. Elder at the hearing produced a letter which she said was from wife No. 1, Mrs. Ethel Elder, now in the Cook County Hospital, Chicago. The letter states that Mrs. Ethel Elder had been married to the defendant in Oklahoma City 18 years ago and never had been divorced.

The woman claiming to be the first wife states in the letter that on March 30, 1929, she was forced to accompany her husband to Pittsburgh and to witness his marriage to the second Mrs. Elder performed in the office of Alderman William J. Hughes, of the South Side. The writer states she was threatened with death if she revealed the first marriage.

Mrs. Alice Smith Elder testified that about a month before her marriage here Elder brought Mrs. Ethel Elder to her home where he had been boarding. He introduced her as his divorced wife, it was testified.

TRIO IN STOLEN CAR ROB MAN

Three armed highwaymen, traveling in a stolen automobile this morning robbed R. G. Kann of the Haddon Hall Apartments of $6 while he was walking in Neville street near Bayard street. He gave police the license number of the machine, and an investigation disclosed that it had been stolen a short time before.

Charles C. Dantzinger, a New York salesman, giving his address here as Webster Hall, this morning reported to police that a sample case containing children's clothing had been stolen from his machine while it was parked in Roberts street. He valued the clothing at $250.

Two apartments at 538 Brushton avenue were looted this morning by a thief, who gained entrance by using a pass key. Mrs. Lillian Spryer and Mrs. D. Reed, both living on the third floor of the apartment, reported that jewelry had been stolen from their rooms. Mrs. Spryer said she lost a gold bar pin and a necklace, and Mrs. Reed said a gold bar pin, a wrist watch and a ring had been stolen from her.

FIRED BY EVANS, ASKS JOB BACK

The Civil Service Commission has held a continued hearing in the appeal of Harry Hively from his discharge by former Controller Henry O. Evans as a clerk in the controller's office. Decision will be deferred until the testimony is typewritten and submitted to the board.

Evans discharged Hively for disloyalty and unfaithfulness by concealment of fraud, shortly after Evans charged the American Reduction Company with improperly charging $1,000,000 against the city in a cost-plus contract for the disposal of garbage.

At a hearing before the commission yesterday, Evans testified that a city bond, unsigned but stamped with the city seal, had been found in Hively's desk, and that Hively had broadcast irregularities of an employe of the controller's office after remaining silent to Evan's invitation for information regarding affairs of the office.

DAILY TRUE STORY

Milk and Melody

WHEN Mavis Cartright was 12 she went to hear "Aida" with her aunt. It was her first grand opera experience. She thought it was wonderful. Of course it would be splendid to be one of the rich ladies in what auntie called the "Golden Horseshoe," but she had much rather be the beautiful lady auntie told her was the "Diva."

On her second trip she saw this grand opera star getting into her carriage. People crowded about and paid her homage, as though she were a queen.

Mavis was a quiet little girl and didn't say much, but right after that second visit to the opera house she decided that she would become a grand opera star.

By the time Mavis was 15 her aunt had discovered the ambition.

"In the first place, dearie," her wise aunt had said, "it would cost far more money than we have to train you for grand opera."

Auntie always talked like that, she said "more money than we have," as though part of it belonged to Mavis. Auntie had taken Mavis when she was orphaned and not quite 5 and brought her up, for auntie was a widow, left with empty arms.

"And in the second place and what is more important," auntie told her, "you will be far happier as the wife of some nice man and mother of a family. nothing on earth can equal that."

"Most all women marry and have families, but only a few are opera singers," Mavis said, "but of course, if we haven't money enough, I'll have to wait until I can earn enough."

"I had rather," said auntie, staring away from Mavis to hide the wetness in her eyes, "be singing a lullaby to a child than to be singing the most difficult aria in grand opera."

Her Aunt Dies

And she did have a nice voice with considerable power and range, although it was utterly untrained, of course.

When Mavis was twenty her aunt died. The family lawyer discussed plans and finances.

"If you sell this little city house, Miss Cartwright," he said, "there will be sufficient left after the estate is settled to invest and bring you an income of around fifty a week. That will enable you to live in the pretty little bungalow in Fernmere that your aunt built for a summer place. There is quite a community out there now."

Mavis thought it over. She might go abroad and study on this money, but there was a frugal, hard-headed streak in her from New England ancestors. If she failed to make good she would be worse off than ever. She decided to live in Fernmere for a while and then perhaps she could find something to do and earn more money and then study.

Old Anna went out to Fernmere with her. Anna had been auntie's only servant since before Mavis was born.

It was beautiful out in Fernmere, with the lake in the valley and the hundred or more cottages nestled around on the sloping hills. Mavis made flower gardens, read a little and kept up her singing practice right along.

There were a number of nice young men out in Fernmere. When Mavis went down to the lake for her daily swim she had plenty of company.

She became quite popular there, however, and when the Fernmere Club put on an amateur musical comedy Mavis won a lot of applause with her singing and acting.

Now and then she had very special parties at the club. There was a reception to the club president's daughter when she got back from her honeymoon. The guests didn't begin to arrive until 11 and Mavis had been sleeping all afternoon in preparation for this.

Party Ends at Five

The party broke up around 5. Mavis was one of the few at the club who didn't drink the synthetic gin and stuff, solely because she didn't like it.

The Thorntons dropped her off at her little bungalow at 5 in the morning.

It was a glorious morning. The sun, just coming up, left the surface of the lake like a pink rose petal.

Mavis went into the big living room, opened up both wide casement windows and stared out. She drank in the beauty, listened to the birds beginning their mating songs and wished she hadn't taken the long nap before the party. She ought to be in bed and sleeping, but sleep wouldn't come.

She went to the piano. Perhaps if she played and sung a while she would be sleepy. Old Anna out in the back couldn't hear her.

She started to play and to sing.

It seemed to her that she had never been in better voice. It was a wonder old Anna didn't wake up, but she felt in the mood. Neighbors were quite distant and sleeping, and it was her very own home, so she argued, she could sing any hour she pleased.

She went into the refrain a second time.

Suddenly she realized that a fine baritone voice was joining in with her own. She turned to the open window and saw a young man with wavy red hair and a white coat.

"Don't stop, please," he said. "Who are you and what are you doing in my yard?" Mavis asked not unkindly but just a trifle stuffily.

"I am your milk man, Miss. Do you usually sing at 5 in the morning?"

"No. I was at a late party."

Mavis stared at his spotless white coat with the gold letters S. D. on the lapels. That meant that he worked for the Sunshine Dairy. The idea of singing a duet with the milkman struck her funny.

"Please sing—how about that one from 'Madame Butterfly' you know—"

Mavis started playing. Let me play it.

She looked up. The young man had come through the window and stood beside her.

Mavis Protests

Why—why you shouldn't come into my house," she said.

"You've got the old servant here who pays me when I collect. Windows and doors open and I'm harmless—also I'm crazy about singing."

Mavis had arisen from the piano bench. The young man sat down and started to play. Mavis sang.

"Good voice, lovely voice—lacks training like mine, but it's really lovely just the same—only I'm not one to tell a person a lot of flattery. Take my voice. I thought I might make grand opera with it, but I took expert advice. I couldn't quite make the grade."

"At least you might be in concert work instead of just driving a milk cart," Mavis said.

Fate seems to have cut me out for a dairyman. Miss Cartwright—my name is Billy Burgess. I've seen you down at the float often. Most of these folks around here are too snooty to suit me, but I think I'll have to drop down tomorrow and then ask you to invite me up for more singing. You certainly have a fine piano."

"I—I don't know," hesitated Mavis.

She wished he wasn't just a milkman. He was really a handsome young man and his voice was thrilling.

The next day Billy Burgess appeared at the float. He and Mavis had a swim. He took her to her home in his smart little roadster. Mavis thought it queer that he would be driving a car like that. He promised to be back in half an hour. He kept his word and appeared in white flannels, blue serge coat, Panama hat—all the world like any of the other chaps around Fernmere.

Several forenoons Mavis and Billy Burgess were together at the lake and later at her piano. She didn't ask him where he lived, but he drove away in his bathing suit and was back in half an hour.

"Come over to dinner tonight and then we'll have an evening of melody," Mavis said.

"That's the penalty of being a working man. It will be some time before I can do that."

"The fates have cast for me the role of a dairyman, Mavis, and I must be content, but since home is the finest place in the world, what better place for singing?"

Fallen in Love

Not once had Billy Burgess attempted any petting with Mavis, but she knew that he had fallen in love with her and she admitted to herself that he was the most charming young man she ever knew.

Then he asked her if he could call the next night.

"I've gone into the big office now," he said.

She told him to come over to dinner.

He came in dinner clothes. Before he left, which was around midnight, he told her that he had fallen in love with her.

"I can support you, Mavis, dear," he said, "and we can even take a little trip abroad."

"But Billy, your work—your position?"

"It will be there, that's assured—and don't dare refuse me—you don't know how much I love you."

"I'm not going to refuse you. My auntie once told me that being married to the right man was the greatest thing in life for a girl."

Then, the next day, Billy took Mavis to his home—the immense granite house with the acres of grounds. She met his father and learned, for the first time, that Billy was the son of the head of the Sunshine Dairy concern, and had been made treasurer. His father had made him learn the game from the ground up, including feeding stock, delivering milk and everything else.

They went to Europe and came back to a nice house Billy's father gave them.

The next summer Billy came in one afternoon and found Mavis singing a lullaby. She blushed.

"I'm practicing, Billy," she said. "My auntie was right—singing lullabies is going to be better than grand opera."

Mavis will always believe that the picture of her auntie, hanging over the piano, actually smiled at her, then.

Mr. Kline, Why Can't You Give Us Cab Substitute?

For a period of four weeks taxicab drivers have been on strike. Companies operating the cabs have had a few machines running in the daytime with driver and guard in each car. That has been merely a gesture. From the standpoint of practical service Pittsburgh has been deprived of a branch of its transportation system for four weeks, waiting for the drivers and their employes to settle differences.

Since it now appears that each side has assumed a dogged attitude with determination to wear down one or the other, isn't it about time the public, which needs taxicab service, receive some substitute while the battle goes on? Isn't the matter serious enough to cause Mayor Kline to take a hand to the end that the city be given a cab service of some kind?

The cab companies and their employes, between them, have the responsibility of giving such service. For four weeks they have failed. That appears to have been quite long enough to permit finding of common grounds for settlement. Since that has not been done, they cannot blame the public if it looks for relief from inconvenience through the only agency organized to give it—the city itself.

This is an emergency in which Mayor Kline could show his gratitude to the large number of voters who had sufficient confidence in him to return him to office. We assume that ordinarily his discretion in this direction is limited, but we also assume that in a serious emergency like this his executive power is very great.

At least he could look into the matter. Temporary licensing of jitney buses suggests itself as a remedy.

The public would be glad to hear from the mayor on this matter.

Public Utility Interest Wants Boulder Dam Power

"Executive usurpation" is not too strong a word to describe the action of Secretary of Interior Wilbur in setting out to nullify the law passed by Congress in the Boulder Dam act.

That law ordered the secretary of the interior to give preference to states and municipalities as purchasers of the electric power generated at the great flood control dam. Public bodies had applied for all the power to be generated, and more.

That law did not suit President Hoover's cabinet member, Mr. Wilbur. Wilbur announced a tentative allocation showing he proposed to give a quarter of the power at once to the Southern California Edison Company and associates. Eventually, he no doubt figured, he could slip them all the power.

But the plain words of the law stood in his way. Repeating the language of the 1920 federal water power act, the 1928 Boulder Dam act said flatly that states and municipalities were to be given preference. The secretary was to decide conflicting applications "with due regard to the public interest."

It took a lawyer to get over that. Wilbur had one, E. C. Finney, solicitor of the Department of Interior. Finney had been assistant to Secretary Fall when Fall was in office. On February 1, Senators Caraway and Norris had this conversation regarding Finney on the floor of the Senate:

MR. CARAWAY: "Mr. President, I hope the Senator will pardon me just a moment. Is that the same Finney who collaborated so efficiently with Doheny and Sinclair?"

MR. NORRIS: "Yes."

MR. CARAWAY: "I thought it must be."

So at Mr. Wilbur's request Mr. Finney, associate of Mr. Doheny and Mr. Sinclair and assistant to Secretary Fall, told Secretary Wilbur just how he could do what he wanted to.

The words "in the public interest," said Mr. Finney, were a "check" upon the preference to be given to municipalities applying for Boulder Dam power. These words, Finney said, are "necessarily a source of broad discretionary power in the secretary."

Now watch the Southern California Edison Company come into the picture.

The Boulder Dam act provides that a municipality applying for power must be given time to get a vote authorizing a bond issue so that it can legally make a contract to pay for power.

Secretary Wilbur asks ex-Secretary Fall's useful Mr. Finney whether he really needs to obey the law in this respect. Suppose, he says, Los Angeles and other cities "cannot now execute enforceable contracts meeting reasonable financial requirements of the secretary." May he, the secretary, go ahead and give the power to the Southern California Edison Company, reserving the right of the municipalities to recover it when and if their bond issues pass?

Sure, says the obliging Finney who, according to Senator Caraway, "collaborated so efficiently with Mr. Sinclair, sure the words "in the public interest" gives the secretary broad discretion. Moreover, "the necessity for flood control makes it to the interest of all parties that the project be initiated and completed at the earliest possible date." So the secretary may give the power to the Southern California Edison Company and get the dam started, quick!

Quick! This is about the first interest the administration has shown in getting the dam started AT ALL. And now "the public interest" requires its rapid construction so that part of its power may be diverted to the Southern California Edison Company, leader of the private utility interests which year after year FOUGHT AGAINST THE DAM'S CONSTRUCTION.

The Baltimore Sun had an interesting and thought-provoking editorial on this subject. It included the following statement:

"DURING HIS CAMPAIGN FOR THE PRESIDENCY, MR. HOOVER HAD THE ALMOST SOLID SUPPORT OF THE UTILITY INTERESTS OF THE COUNTRY. * * * IT IS ONLY NATURAL THAT PRESIDENT HOOVER, THE WINNER, SHOULD BE GRACIOUSLY DISPOSED TO THE UTILITY INTERESTS. TO BE OTHERWISE MIGHT SEEM TO SMACK OF INGRATITUDE * * *

"IT MAY REMAIN TRUE THAT SECRETARY WILBUR, SLIDING ALONG ON THAT SLIPPERY PHRASE, 'PUBLIC INTEREST,' CAN OBTAIN LEGAL SANCTION FOR TURNING THE POWER OF BOULDER DAM OVER TO THE SOUTHERN CALIFORNIA UTILITY COMPANY, THUS HE CAN MAKE A SUBSTANTIAL PAYMENT ON ACCOUNT FOR THE SUPPORT GIVEN TO MR. HOOVER BY THE UTILITIES IN HIS CAMPAIGN."

All this statement in black type is the statement of the Baltimore Sun. Of course, no Hearst paper would state or insinuate or even think that Mr. Wilbur would pay the political debts of the administration to the corporations at the expense of his own beloved state of California.

We have never met any of the 500 mysterious Americans who have incomes of a million bank buttons. They don't graze in herds.

If we ever get our grapples on that much gravy we would freeze up like Vladivostok Harbor and give away dimes with the same generous impulse with which a porcupine scatters his quills.

In order to possess an income of a million you must be worth 15 or 20 millions which is a tune that very few Hawaiians can play on their ukuleles. Yet there are 500 discontented citizens who are forced to back up and unload that much every season.

A man could get rich thinking up exemptions for those birds.

We know that Rockefeller, Ford and a boatload of Morgans are way up in the king row. And also a few people who have been fortunate enough to have faster boats than the Coast Guards.

John Gilbert probably is overcome annually by the sizzling fumes from a superior bankroll. John's principal exemptions are for picnic plates and nose putty.

We don't know any columnist who suffers from such protuberant financial mumps. And the only radio entertainer who might be in the golden brigade is King George.

Primo Carnera will get there if his feet hold out. Tommy Lipton should place among his expenses an outboard motor for his new Shamrock.

Rudy Vallee is rapidly megaphoning himself into an important string of crullers. One more blindfold test and we will be in that class ourselves.

To make the glue a little more mucilagenous there are 24 of the neighbor's children whose incomes are over five million each for the fiscal year beginning June first and ending in paper profits.

That's a tasty dish for your insulated bridgework. All we would like is one snatch at those dazzling receipts with a wrist that has been well developed by street car straps.

Being a courteous gentleman who always stands up in his rowboat to tip his hat to steam yachts we would like to get the alchemist's secret of transmuting lead pipe into golden plumbing.

It must be great to be so rich that they have to take your blood pressure with a tire guage.

We are glad that there are so many men kicking in at the window. It is an indication that the pale, October slump of last year is over and that a convalescent public is about to hang up a new world record for sprinting in wheel chairs.

-:- PROCRUSTES -:-

By Herbert Kaufman

THERE are folks who still page for the Great Golden Age
And invoke the old gods from The Mountain:
Wights who'd lounge in the haze of those aurean days
When Olympians might with a finger-flip raze
A forest, or maybe, by love set a'craze,
Turn an obdurate fay to a fountain,
But as Time recollects, in some divers respects,
The aeon was far overrated,
And though "golden" it be, it has oft' seemed to me
Pinchbeck stuff and, at THAT, thinly plated.

FOR example: a taxi-cab couldn't be had,
And the cut of their dress coats was SHOCKINGLY bad,
While the Ritziest Inn (if there's fact in reports)
Was a ramshackle, ONE-BEDDED roadhouse of sorts,
This sleep-shop—(forgive the descent into BLAGUE)—
Was maintained by Procrustes, a CUT-UP and wag;
A whimsical rogue, with a flair for a hoax,
And a custard-pie, slap-stickish penchant for jokes,
His slogan is still widely printed, to wit:
"Our motto is, 'We fit the hardest to fit,'"

SHOULD an undersized wretch,
Fail at full length to stretch,
Clear from headboard to foot, on a rack he was put,
Or should petulant salesmen complain that the sheet
Left a gap at the shoulder or missed at the feet,
With a technique precise
As a surgeon's, he'd slice
Heads and hands from his guests, 'til they fitted real nice,

WHAT'S the moral? Oh, dear,
Don't I make the point clear?
You've forgotten pinched rations and raised rates, I fear,
When mine host patriotically "helped" win the war
By HALVING our portions and CHARGING us more,
The modern Procrustes don't dislocate sockets,
Yet "hotel operators" (significant name!)
Keep pulling the traveler's leg just the same:
But as TRIMMERS they stick to his POCKETS,

By WILL ROGERS.

KIDS do put ideas into their parents' heads, I reckon. Sometimes it ain't hardly safe to let parents run around loose among the kids, on account of the ideas that are apt to be floating around.

There was a girl by the name of Dorothy that was seven years old, and she was telling what she had heard in school about animals.

"And say, Daddy," she says, "do you know that some animals get new sets of fur every winter?"

"No," says the dad, "I think you must be mistaken."

"No mistake about it, Teacher absolutely told us herself. Teacher even said, and you can just go in and ask her if some animals don't get absolutely a new set of furs every winter."

"All right, all right," says the dad. "Here's a dime, then, and get yourself an ice cream cone, only don't tell that about the furs to your mother, will you? It might bother her a lot."

By Elsie Robinson

PROF. MAX F. MYER, of the University of Missouri, circulated a sex questionnaire amongst his students and was promptly bounced by President Stratton D. Brooks and his board of directors for doing so.

Which is one more argument for getting your education out in the wide open spaces instead of in colleges.

If there's one subject, above all others, which should be taught in our colleges, it's sex. And to suspend a professor because he encourages a discussion of it, is about as asinine an act as could well be perpetrated.

There is a sweetly idiotic tradition, still firmly believed by Nice People, that a knowledge of sex arrives spontaneously When The Proper Time Comes.

This is pure tommy rot.

It is no more possible to learn the vast truth about sex in a flash of intuition, than it is to learn differential calculus by closing one's eyes and repeating "eeny-meenie-minie-mo!"

Sex in 1930 is not a single, physical act . . . nor a group of bodily reactions. It is a million evolutions removed from jungle mating and has as little relationship to that primitive function as grand operas has to the grunting of a gorilla.

The young gorilla could learn all he needed to know about sex from instinct and observation. Not so the modern young American. Sex is no longer a question of knowing where babies come from. It is a question of knowing where love comes from—of tracing love's delicate and mysterious appearance in the hearts of men and women . . . and its tragic appearance when those hearts, through ignorance or carelessness, fail to keep contact.

Sex is the biggest and most important subject in human life. It touches every department of human behavior and ties up with every function of the mind, body and soul.

It isn't a sin to ask questions about sex. It's a sin NOT TO! Every natural young human has a lively and constant interest in sex. That interest should be frankly satisfied. There should be no sniffing and sniggering.

No savage tribe permits its children to enter marriage without elaborate sex instruction. That instruction is often highly unscientific, but at least the savages do SOMETHING . . . while we, in darkest America, merely sit back and say "SH!" And expect God to tell the Dear Young Things what it's all about.

If a plumber knew as little about putting in a sink as the average couple know about their own bodies and mind, and their relationship to each other, he'd be fired from every union.

And we Americans are paying a tragic price for our dirty-niceness. Prof. Myer was suspended because he did discuss sex . . . WE ARE BEING PENALIZED IN TEARS AND HATE, AND SHATTERED DREAMS, BECAUSE WE DON'T DISCUSS IT!

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

The Restless Heart

THOUGH a wonder wakes at man's ceaseless quest
For aught which is far, when the near is best,
It was ever the way of the restless heart
That must seek the things which are set apart;
It visions always a happiness
From the joys elusive which few possess,
It holds that dearest which is most rare,
Lauds the orchid, forgets that the rose is fair
And waits for the nightingale's song in the dark,
Though it lack the joy of the meadow lark.

But ever the restless hearts have gone
From vision to vision, on and on;
After they win to one fond desire
They seek for a star that is farther, higher,
And well for man who one wish attains
That new hope waxes as old hope wanes,
For it is the restless heart that leads
To triumph ever in dreams and deeds.

THE SCIENCE OF LIFE

By H. G. WELLS
In Collaboration With
Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells.

NOW euglena has got two perfectly distinct ways of nourishing itself and growing. It has a mouth and can take things into its body and there digest them after the manner of animals.

But it is also green in color; it possesses chlorophyll and can build up its tissues out of the simplest ingredients after the manner of plants. It can do whichever it likes. Here then is a problem; is euglena an animal or a plant?

H. G. Wells

We noted in the last chapter that chlorophyll is the characteristic feature of vegetable organization. But when we peer through our microscopes at the curious world of micro-organisms we find the distinction breaking down.

There are colorless flagellates which whip about and feed like animals; we find very similar flagellates, whipping about in much the same way but green and building up their substances in the manner of plants.

We find some of the filamentous algae, delicate green threads of protoplasm, motionless and nourishing themselves like plants; we find the moulds, which have very similar threads but colorless, motionless also, but nourishing themselves in darkness on substances of complex constitution.

And we find other filamentous algae, with chlorophyll, which are not motionless, but sway and glide about like microscopic serpents by some means that is at present entirely mysterious. What then are we to do?

If we regard chlorophyll as the definitive feature of plants, then mushrooms are animals. If we regard immobility as the criterion, the green flagellates are animals—and what of the streaming protoplasm of many plant cells and the active animal-like spermatozoa of ferns and mosses?

We are forced in fact to abandon the old categorical distinction between animal and vegetable, to recognize that there are transitional forms lying between the two.

There is a curious assembly of such forms—the green flagellates, the "slime-fungi," and one or two others—which are described in both zoological and botanical text books—a sort of no-man's-land (or, rather, both-men's-land) between the animal and vegetable kingdoms.

And now we must point out the indefiniteness of a second categorical distinction. We described the structure of amoeba and pointed out that it is in all essentials like a single cell from one of the higher organisms; upon the fact we based a distinction between single-celled and many-celled organisms.

Now the line between the two, like the line between animals and plants, is not so much a fine black line as a broad gray smudge, not so much a boundary as a neutral zone. Here again there are transitional forms.

We noted that the commonest method of reproduction in protozoa is simple fission. The creature pulls itself into two halves, two cells, which creep away in different directions and live independently of each other.

Now suppose that instead of parting they remained stuck together; suppose that they divided and divided and built up a colony of many adhering cells instead of a population of free individuals, the result would be a step in the direction of the many-celled body of the higher animals.

And, indeed, such a process as this actually occurs during the life-history of many flagellates. The single-celled forms may remain together more or less permanently as colonies, and thus they lead up to the many-celled plants, to the simpler water-weeds and then to the seaweeds.

Because of this relationship the whole series, from Euglena to the gigantic seaweeds of Antarctic seas, is grouped together and spoken of as the Algae.

Let us examine the various kinds and note this grading in more detail.

The simplest plants include the green flagellates that we have already noted, together with several other single-celled kinds.

There is, for example, the green coating on the shady sides of trees, rocks, fences and the like, which consists of millions of tiny, globular, thick-walled algae. And there is an enormous group of forms, the diatoms, which are characterized by the siliceous shells in which they live, shells consisting of two valves which fit together like a pill-box and its lid.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Feb. 8.—The romantic urge to shiver an early morning lance on a leafy hillside has not entirely vanished in O. Henry's Bagdad-on-the-Subway. The heart of the swashbuckler beats under many prosaic business suits. In the past four years there have been three "affairs of honor."

In one a Don Juanish actor was pinked on the neck for a slight trickle of blood and in another there were, instead of stretcher casualties, sudden renewals of lost friendship which wound up in a two-day jamboree in a Park Avenue hotel. The third sent the two principals to hospitals for several stitches.

There have been from time to time other challenges, mostly in night clubs, over insults to fair ladies but they usually wound up with everybody having "breakfast at Child's." New York has more than a dozen fencing schools with memberships running from 20 up to 50.

Among the expert swordsmen are John Barrymore, Walter Hampden and the photographer Nickolas Muray. Barrymore and Hampden took up fencing purely as a professional asset to their stage endeavors but found it so engrossing they have made it a hobby and are expert duelists.

The New York Fencers' Club is reputed to have the blue-blooded membership list. It includes names of the Goulds, Astors and Vanderbilts and its 15-story building in the fashionable East Fifties often amazes those who thought fencing remained only as a faint Victorian taint.

Along Broadway are a number of fencing schools which quickly train those who have been assigned to bold-knight roles on the stage or in the movies. The lessons are from $5 to $10 and one of the best known teachers is Louis Senac who has made a comfortable fortune in his calling.

In the past few years fencing has been taken up by a number of capitalists, as a relaxation and aid to reducing. A well known lady novelist is adept at foils. The oldest club is in Washington Square and it attracts a sizable list of devotees regularly.

The biggest individual phone bill for a hotel patron in New York for a week is reported to be $875. The visitor was from San Francisco and all the calls were for his wife and six children—which speaks excellently for San Francisco husbands and fathers.

The cooing of Hollywood turtle doves is a boon to long distance phone receipts. When one of a devoted couple flits to New York, the wires between are in constant buzz. As a class the movie folk are the greatest of all long distance telephoners.

My English valet—that is I help to support him along with a dozen or so others on a hotel floor—complained politely but firmly, as only a valet can, that an outside presser had recently put creases in my coat sleeves. "It is only done, sir, with uniforms," he explained. He seemed fearfully perturbed—fearfully. In fact I'm a little put out myself. And he better keep his nose out of my outside pressing business.

A block long chunk has been taken out of that picturesque strip of pleasant old homes with front yards on West 23d street between 9th and 10th avenues. It was the last touch of that brooding calm that distinguished old Chelsea. A net work of steel has already arisen to the skies for the Gargantuan community apartment house to be known as London Terrace.

The editor of a magazine dealing in western tales tells me he has a set formula that always clicks. The Sheriff of Bitter Gulch on a hot day is nodding in front of his office. The bad man gallops up in a cloud of alkali dust, dismounts and slaps the sheriff in the face.

"All the sheriff has to do from then on," says the editor, "is to chase the bad man for 40,000 words."

Morning paper: "A Broadway jazz artist has given up hunting on account of its cruelty."

Two guesses. What else he should give up to add to his human qualities.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

ARE you too easily satisfied?

Then you are not likely to strike out, to work and plan.

If you are satisfied with your accomplishment, with what you have, then you will not have the desire and ambition to exert yourself for larger possessions.

If you have no desire to add to your savings, to own a better home, to have it more expensively furnished, to provide more comforts and luxuries for your family, you will not strive to do so.

If your present job is as good as you care to hold, you are not exerting yourself to gain a more lucrative one.

If you have adopted a plan of living which permits you to go along easily and with little effort you will not progress.

Of course it is foolish for you to worry and become discouraged because you see no way to better your condition.

But it is equally foolish and unfair to yourself and your family to settle back on a plane of mediocre success so that you can save yourself effort and the close application necessary to rise above ordinary success.

Where there is advancement there is dissatisfaction and desire for better things.

Contentment means there will be no progress.
